TO PASS MEASURE
Answers Opponents of Bill by Asking Them to Suggest Remedy or Else Hold Their Peace

(By Associated Press.)
CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Secretary McAdoo declared tonight in a speech to the commercial club of Chicago that the administration ship purchase bill now pending in congress offers the best solution of the problem of how to build up an adequate American merchant marine, he said. He said that the bill was the only one that would give the government the right to purchase ships at a price that would be fair to the merchant, and that it would also give the government the right to charter ships at a price that would be fair to the merchant. He said that the bill would also give the government the right to charter ships at a price that would be fair to the merchant, and that it would also give the government the right to charter ships at a price that would be fair to the merchant.

Following Out Suggestion of President, Department of Labor Announces Plans for Employment Bureau BRANCHES WILL COVER ALL SECTIONS OF U. S.
Aim Is to Bring Jobless Man and Man Who Wants Help Closer Together, Says the Committee

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—A national employment bureau reaching into every section of the United States will be put in operation by the labor department next week. It will be operated along the lines of President Wilson's suggestion that the government should "find jobs for the jobless." The bureau will be organized by the Committee on Unemployment, which was created by the president. The bureau will be organized by the Committee on Unemployment, which was created by the president.

GREETERS PICK ATLANTA FOR CONVENTION CITY

Hotel Clerks of America Will Hold Meeting Here June 7, 8 and 9

The Atlanta convention bureau through Fred Houser, secretary, announces it has just secured for Atlanta the annual national convention of the Hotel Clerks of America, the hotel clerks' organization.

The convention was secured in competition with Kansas City, Milwaukee and Detroit, and David Olmsted, of Chicago, chairman of the board of governors, writes Secretary Houser that the Greeters are delighted with the choice.

The Greeters will meet in Atlanta June 7, 8 and 9, with 100 Greeters and 200 Greeters from over the country in attendance. Every night hotel in America will be represented.

From now until the convention these men, who are daily and constantly in contact with the traveling and touring public, will advertise the name of Atlanta, and after the convention they will tell the world what sort of entertainment Atlanta gave them.

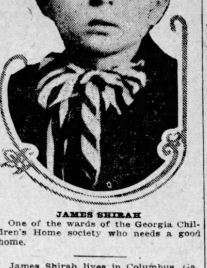

In connection with national convention, the Southeastern Greeters, which is the branch of the national organization in this territory, comprising several states, will hold their annual meeting.

Another convention just secured by the convention bureau is the annual meeting of the southeastern representatives of the Barter Protective association of Philadelphia, which publishes the Home Journal and Country Gentleman. Something over 125 delegates will attend this meeting, which will be held at the Hotel Hamilton on Saturday and Sunday, January 24 and 25.

One of the wards of the Georgia Children's Home who needs a good home.

James Shirah lives in Columbus, Ga., but he has no home, no father, no mother. He is one of the charges of the Georgia Children's Home society.

The society now has a large number of little boys and girls who need good homes. They range in age from a baby of two months to a girl of twelve years. The society agrees to place a child for fifty days' trial in a home. If the child suits the adopter and the adopter parents suit the society, he stays.

Applications for children will be received at 1319 Hurt building, Atlanta.

BUILD NEW CAMPAIGN MEETING WITH SUCCESS

Loans for Construction Purposes Are Picking Up Rapidly Now

Two aspects of the building market on Saturday attended the show at the Chamber of Commerce. "Build Now" campaign is meeting with success. Several loan agencies reported that during the last week their loans for building purposes have picked up materially. Mr. Green, of Thomson & Lyness, reported that the agency with which he is connected has during the last week made three or four very substantial loans for building purposes and also that the demand for money with which to finance building projects is greater since the first of the year. Other agencies also reported an increase in demand.

PLAN ENTERTAINMENT

The local executive committee of the Southern Supply and Machinery association has held its first meeting to make plans for entertaining the annual convention of this organization in Atlanta on April 14-15-16, and will shortly announce the committee. This convention will bring to Atlanta about 750 delegates.

The annual meeting of the board of directors of the Georgia building bureau will be held January 26, and the annual report of Secretary Houser will show a year of remarkable results. Among other things, it will show that in nine months, from April 1 to December 31, the bureau mailed out 10,678 letters, in which were enclosed 68,017 pieces of advertising matter. During the same period the bureau mailed 132 cuts of Atlanta news to newspapers and periodicals over the country for use in advance publicity concerning the convention held in Atlanta. The bureau was instrumental in securing for Atlanta no less than 114 conventions for 1914. These conventions brought to the city 92,693 visitors, and a conservative estimate they spent $1,668,584 while here. The secretary visited 24 cities and traveled a total distance of 11,264 miles.

ASK MORE FUNDS THAN CITY REVENUE WARRANTS

Finance Committee of Council Has Hard Problem in Solving Budget

The finance committee of council passed over the meager state of affairs Saturday and is preparing to meet down Monday morning to the task of making a January appropriation sheet. The difficulty of the task before the committee was made apparent during the preliminary session on the 6th, when the chairman, head of the committee, declared that the various city departments have asked $4,708,000 for operation and maintenance during 1915, which is more than the total revenue of the city during 1914.

Heads of the various departments were taken into consultation with Chairman A. W. Paffinger and J. J. West, chief clerk of the controller's office, before the estimate was made, and many have the amount asked for to maintain the department.

Under the automatic increase law, which cuts down the budget by 10 percent, the committee before it has to cut down the budget by 10 percent. It is pointed out that the cost of maintaining the department is constantly increasing. For instance, there is an increase of $1,000 over 1914 in the cost of teachers' salaries in the school department alone.

Two "Jean Valjeans" Throw Atlanta Cops In Small-Sized Panic

Station sergeant and call men on the evening watch at police station Saturday received a rude jolt that will not soon be forgotten, when two exponents of the example set by the famous Frenchman, Jean Val Jean, dropped in on them at different times quite unexpectedly.

Lucius Wells, colored, appeared at the station and asked that he be held for the authorities in Athens, Ga. He was taken to the station and held in a cell. Andrew Adams, white, claiming Chicago as his home, also called on the station and was held in a cell. Both men are being held prisoners here until the authorities in the cities mentioned can be communicated with.

JERSEY MEN INSPECT CITY SEWERAGE PLANT

Camden City Officials Highly Praise Work Done for Atlanta

A delegation of nine city officials from Camden, N. J., arrived in Atlanta looking over the city's sewerage disposal plants and Saturday night they left for New Orleans to inspect a sewerage pumping plant there.

Camden is preparing to build both a pump and a disposal plant, and they are making the trip to look over the Atlanta plants.

The officials were shown over the Atlanta plants by Carl W. Brittain, assistant chief of construction, and the work here received many compliments from them.

PUBLIC WORKS GUARDIANS HOLD FIVE-HOUR SESSION

New Committee Considers Mass of County Work Facing It for Coming Year

Five hours Saturday were spent by the new public works committee of the county commissioners in taking up the mass of work authorized, asked and under consideration, which faces them for the coming year.

W. Tom Wynn, presiding as chairman at the initial meeting of the committee, Oscar Mills, when the question of building a concrete or wooden road bridge was up for discussion, said he wanted to put himself on record as advocating concrete in this instance and in every other instance.

Atlanta Operators Set New World Record for Speed in Telegraphing

Two operators in the Atlanta office of the Western Union Telegraph company, H. C. operator of 30 White street, and J. R. Linton, of 827 Glenwood avenue, are said to have made a world's record for fast telegraphing.

Last Thursday these two, working with W. C. Pain and J. W. Ayard on the Jacksonville end, handled 1,415 messages in nine hours and a half, or an average of 55 messages per hour. Each operator of two men in the same remarkable when it is stated that there were 25 minutes during which no messages were transmitted on account of fast trouble.

Previous to the performance of the Atlanta office, the world's record was claimed by the Chicago Western Union operating room, with two men, a length of time as the record was made there, was 14 minutes and 30 seconds. Linton and Turner will represent Atlanta in connection with the Panama exposition.

A pretty big claim, but listen—

"All-weather food" sounds good to most people, but Grape-Nuts goes one better. It not only contains the entire nutriment of wheat, but also the rich nourishment of barley.

More! Grape-Nuts is long baked and digests quickly. Most wheat foods—bread for instance and some so-called breakfast foods—require 2 1/2 to 3 hours for digestion.

Grape-Nuts food digests generally in about one hour.

Being highly concentrated, there's more actual food value, weight for weight, in Grape-Nuts than in some other foods sold in bigger packages.

Grape-Nuts contains the vital bone, muscle and nerve making phosphates necessary for health and life, but lacking in most wheat foods—white bread especially. A daily ration of Grape-Nuts readily makes up for this lack.

ATLANTIC NATIONAL FIRE IS REINSURED IN N. H. CO.

John J. McKay and W. M. King Will Supervise Agency at Macon

(Special Dispatch to The Journal) MAcon, Ga., Jan. 9.—Announcement has been made that the New Hampshire Fire Insurance company, of Manchester, N. H., has assumed all reinsured liability under Atlantic National Fire Insurance company policies, under the contract entered into the New Hampshire company assuming automatically, liability under Atlantic National policies or certificates issued on or after January 1, 1915.

This is one of the most important announcements made recently in the southern fire insurance field and in addition to being a good thing for the Atlantic National, is equally as beneficial for Macon, meaning that three large fire insurance companies will have their business in this section supervised by Georgia men.

Under the new arrangement the policies of the Atlantic National will be issued by the New Hampshire as the Atlantic National agency of that company and will be supervised by John J. McKay. The New Hampshire has appointed Mr. McKay and W. M. King joint managers of the South Atlantic department.

The Equitable Fire and Marine Insurance company of Providence, R. I., an old company with over $1,000,000 direct and more than $1,000,000 collateral assets, has named Mr. McKay as their general agent.

GEORGIA POULTRY SHOW WILL BE HELD THIS WEEK

Exhibits Will Be Placed in Old Alcazar Theater on Peachtree Street

The annual exhibit of the Georgia Poultry association will be held this week in Atlanta, with breeders from all over the state entering fine birds. Entries will begin to arrive in the city Sunday at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and all day Monday will be devoted to arranging them in the hall at 99 Peachtree street, the old Alcazar theater, which had been engaged for this year's show. The show officially opens at 3 o'clock Tuesday morning. It will close on the 14th. A small admission price ten cents will be charged to the public.

The judges of the show will be: for poultry, Air Bunting, for pigeons, Joe Brown Connally; for pet stock, Lewis Brown.

MAN SAYS HIS FATHER ELOPED WITH HIS BRIDE

(By Associated Press.) NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Franklin D. Wood, a young hospital interne, named his own father as correspondent in a suit for divorce from his wife brought to trial in the supreme court today.

It was alleged the young man's father eloped with his bride on the very night of the wedding and took her to Chicago. Young Wood's mother testified in the suit that she had found her husband and her son's wife occupying apartments together in Chicago.

SULPHUR FOR ECZEMA APPLIED LIKE COLD CREAM IT STOPS ITCHING AND DRIES SKIN ERUPTIONS RIGHT UP

With the first application of bold-sulphur the angry itching attending any eczema eruption ceases and its remarkable healing powers begin. Sulphur, says a renowned dermatologist, just common bold-sulphur, made into a thick cream will soothe and heal the skin when irritated and broken out with eczema or any form of eruption. The moment it is applied all itching ceases and after two or three applications the eczema disappears, leaving the skin clear and smooth.

It tells eczema sufferers to set from any good pharmacy an ounce of bold-sulphur and apply it to the irritated, inflamed skin, the same as you would any cold cream.

For many years this soothing, healing sulphur has occupied a secure position in the treatment of cutaneous affections by reason of its parasite-destroying property. It is not only parasitic, but also antipruritic, antiseptic and remarkably healing in all irritable and inflammatory conditions of the skin. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to instantly subside the irritation and heal the eczema right up and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin.—(Adv.)

STOMACH RELIEF NO INDIGESTION, GAS, SOURNESS—PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN

Time it! In five minutes your upset stomach will feel fine

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you must not injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unflinching action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store, and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and causes gas, causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eruptions of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach, all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.—(Adv.)

CALOMEL IS MERCURY. IT SICKENS! CLEAN LIVER AND BOWELS GENTLY

Don't lose a day's work! If your liver is sluggish or bowels constipated take "Dodson's Liver Tone."

You're bilious! Your liver is sluggish! You feel lazy, dizzy and all knocked out. Your head is dull, your tongue is coated; breath bad; stomach sour and bowels constipated. But don't take nauseating calomel. It makes you sick, you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel crashes into your bile like dynamite, breaking it up. That's when you feel that awful nausea and cramping.

If you want to enjoy the nicest gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced just take a teaspoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight. Your druggist or dealer sells you a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone under my personal money-back guarantee that each spoonful will clean your sluggish liver better than a dose of nasty calomel and that it won't make you sick.

Dodson's Liver Tone is real liver medicine. You'll know it next morning because you will wake up feeling fine, your liver will be working, your head clear and distress gone, your stomach will be sweet and your bowels regular. You will feel like working; you'll be cheerful, full of vigor and ambition.

Dodson's Liver Tone is entirely vegetable, therefore harmless and can be salivated. Give it to your children. Millions of people are using Dodson's Liver Tone instead of dangerous calomel now. Your druggist will tell you that the use of calomel is almost stopped entirely here.—(Adv.)

Shade Over Night

15 to 25-Year-Old Native Trees, 30 to 40 Inches in Circumference, Transplanted and Guaranteed to Grow

The scenes which we have placed in this advertisement show the results of our method of transplanting full-grown native trees. We have been in the business for ten years, and we know how to do perfectly what we are attempting to do.

Why should you plant a small sprig and wait for it to grow into a large shade tree, when we can go into the woods, get the particular tree or trees that you want, and transplant them in your yard—and guarantee them to live and grow. We have transplanted hundreds of large trees, from 30 to 40 inches in circumference, and we have the proofs to show you that we have always given, are giving now, and can give you perfect satisfaction. We GUARANTEE to do that.

The cost of transplanting large shade trees into your yard or lot is small when compared with the increased value which each tree will add to your place, to say nothing of the comforts of fine shade trees. If you have a lot that would be more valuable, did it have some beautiful shade trees, then see us about it—the defect can easily and quickly be remedied; if your home needs a few shade trees to make it the beautiful place that it should be, then see us about it.

Mr. E. W. Clapp, Manager,
Atlanta Shade Tree Co.,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:-

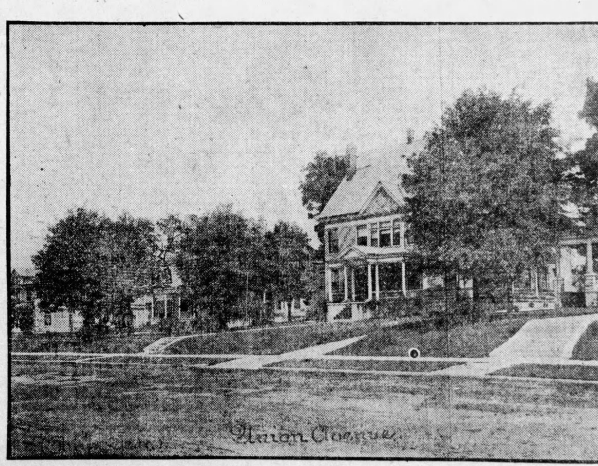

Believing that you are doing a good work for Atlanta and for quite a number of its citizens in beautifying their grounds, I am very glad to give you my unqualified endorsement.

Sometime ago I bought a very attractive lot in Atlanta and intended to build a home on it, but finally decided not to do so because of the fact that it had no shade trees on the front and I finally sold the place.

Not a great while ago I was negotiating for the Empire place on Peachtree Road, which was just what I wanted in every respect excepting that it had practically no shade trees in front of the house; about that time you called to see me and stated that you could do so and I immediately closed the trade for the place and made a contract with you to put out a lot of trees, which have done in a most satisfactory way and if the trees live, which you guarantee they will do and which I believe will be the case, I feel that there is nothing else about my new home to be desired.

I am very glad to give you this endorsement because I feel that a business like yours should be encouraged to the utmost.

Very truly yours,
E. W. Clapp

Crackers List Many Games for Spring Season

Three Newcomers in Recent Years Among List, Reds, Pirates and Phillies—No American Leaguers Booked to Appear

By Innis Brown

With the first crack of the bat at home at least still some two months ahead, the time is a bit early to begin to size up the prospects in store for Atlanta's 1915 battle front is yet a matter of wild guess, as Bill himself doesn't know how the batting order will read, nor finally deciphered even a working basis.

However, there is one phase of the coming season which is already being made to the public to the regular season in the form of exhibition games. Practically every big league team in the country will drift south the latter part of February for the purpose of warming the limbs in the old southern sun, and when the big league birds drift south there will be in a couple of weeks or so before arriving back at the home camp for the opening of the league season.

Thus far five visiting teams have been scheduled to appear at Ponce de Leon. These are the Cincinnati Reds, the worst champion Braves, the Philadelphia Nationals and the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Louisville Colonels, who seek to close the past year in the American League, will arrive on March 21-25.

With the exception of the Braves and the Colonels these are newcomers for the season, at least for several years past. The Reds will wear the old, appearing in March 21-25. This Manager Herwig will ship his contingent of candidates to Alexandria, La., for their spring training. He will work with the Bluebellanders will drop off here for a couple of days. Among the new arrivals will be the Philadelphia Nationals and the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Louisville Colonels, who seek to close the past year in the American League, will arrive on March 21-25.

Advances notes on the Knoxville Tigers, of the Tennessee city, touched the information that the quietest, most making a tour of cities in this section, quite a bit about playing the game, as it was written. For once, at least, the foreboding information passed out as per se. The Knoxville club boys succeeded in defeating them in their games last night. But they were returned winners on a local court this winter. The final count showed 15 to 12.

The Knoxville boys romped onto the floor full of snap and ginger and they were never exhausted during the game. They passed, following the ball, and took something of its effectiveness in the basketball category, including a not infrequent bit of goal shooting. The Knoxville boys were kept on their guard during the first half, but they were lulled when the first half ended by the count of 15 to 12.

Chief among the disturbers of the equilibrium of Coach Rogers' boys was one Mr. Reader. Mr. Reader is a trim ball athlete with a tendency toward sloping round shoulders. This fact is mentioned not in a spirit of praise nor of disparagement. At any rate, it did not seem to worry him in any considerable extent. The report that he spent the afternoon galloping around the gymnasium floor is undoubtedly a mistake. He was in addition rather a good player, and he was not at all out of the game during the progress of the game, which was to the inference that he did not spend the afternoon scraping off leather on the court.

The entire local bunch pulled together consistently better in the second half, with the result that they ran up 23 points, the visitors were increasing their total by 11. As stated above, Forbes rang up four field shots, Duhamel, Carter and Weaver contributed two each, and Harrison pocketed one.

Sale of Lajoie Recalls Story of Former War

Big Larry Was Prominent Figure in the Exciting Campaign That Resulted in the Establishment of the Present American League

By Innis Brown

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 9.—Nap Lajoie becomes a member of Connie Mack's Athletics this season, and this latest move on the American league checker, recalls to old-timers in baseball one of the most interesting stories of the American's early history.

It recalls to them the time that a real fight, similar to fights of much more recent date between the Reds and Cubs, was made by several clubs for Lajoie's services. One of those clubs was the Athletics, which had been built up by Lajoie and would have had him probably all these years, but for the fact that the Athletics, at Lajoie's request, during the course of which he "lugged" along, with Bill Bernhard, Lajoie signed a three-year contract with the Cleveland club where he has been ever since. "That was in 1902."

It was this incident that first showed that a great manager Connie Mack was a member of the Athletics, which had been built up by Lajoie and would have had him probably all these years, but for the fact that the Athletics, at Lajoie's request, during the course of which he "lugged" along, with Bill Bernhard, Lajoie signed a three-year contract with the Cleveland club where he has been ever since. New Basketball League in Field

Six Teams Organize at Y. M. C. A.—Will Play Five-Game Schedule—Games on Wednesday

A new factor in the Atlanta basketball field has just been organized, and proposes to get working soon. This new organization is a league formed at the Y. M. C. A., and it will begin its schedule on the night of Wednesday, the 10th.

The league is composed of six teams, each of which will play five games, each team meeting every other in the league. The teams are: the Atlanta Athletic, the Atlanta Athletic, the Atlanta Athletic, the Atlanta Athletic, the Atlanta Athletic, and the Atlanta Athletic.

GOLFERS CONSIDER PLAN TO INCREASE SIZE OF CUP

Golf gossip, these days, turns more persistently than ever toward the proposition of increasing the diameter of the putting hole. Amateurs, of course, are expected to approve the plan, but among the professionals there are not a few, too, who are endorsing it.

George D. H. is, for example, recommending it, and he is not alone. It is a plan that is being considered by a number of the leading golfers in the country, and it is being considered by a number of the leading golfers in the country.

ELECTRIC RAILROADS.

URGES TURNER'S REPORT

He Would Pass Law to Abolish Smoke Nuisance in Atlanta.

The annual report of City Electrician R. C. Turner, which has just been completed, recommends that the city council take immediate steps toward abolishing the smoke nuisance in Atlanta by bringing the trains in with electric instead of steam engines.

Any progress to be made in reclaiming the space between the Washington street viaduct and the Fort street bridge a committee should be appointed to get up preliminary estimates of the cost of electrifying the tracks in this space or a larger area, says the report.

Mr. Turner further remarks on that recommendation as follows: "Any plan of reclaiming this area which does not include electrification of the trains is doomed to failure as it is impossible to keep a steam locomotive from smoking."

In New York the city worked on the problem of electrification several years before the railroad agreed to make the change to electric drive. Since the change has been made the new method of handling the trains and the more efficient power derived from the more ample handling of the railroad companies to voluntarily extend the electric lines of New York City.

"The railroads in Atlanta are favorably situated and could be electrified at a minimum cost as there are no special engineering problems to be solved as there are in New York."

"A steam locomotive of the burning type is the most inefficient apparatus in the world as over half the energy in the coal goes out the stack."

It has been held in a number of court decisions that a city has a right to abate a nuisance and also the right to prevent the method of abatement to be used.

Atlanta should make a start on the electrification of the steam roads in the uptown district at once."

MANY NEW WIRES.
The city electrician declares that during the year 1914 the electric light and telephone companies, under the supervision of the department, have replaced many thousands of miles of wire in addition to installing a number of miles of underground.

"The effect of this repairing work," says the report, "has reflected a decreased number of accidents and the total absence of the usual list of electrician and maintenance men."

Turner declares while the condition of the property of the companies improved that much work still remains to be done before the overhead lines will meet the highest standard required for this class of construction.

In this connection he points out that it is now the center of a hub or a system of high tension transmission lines, of construction which is not to be prohibited the stretching of wires over the trees of the city company, and except by experienced electrician, and declares that the entire system of such a kind of accidents like that in which an employee of the new Ford branch factory lost his life recently.

Turner touches on the recent fight for a reduction in the rate, which the council has apparently dropped, and says that a further fight before the railroad commission, when business conditions are normal, will result in the rate being reduced to what it was before the fight.

Eat Like A Boy

Let Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Assist Your Stomach Whenever It Needs Help. They Are Safe and Sure.

A Trial Package Free to All.

If you really want to digest a meal, take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after eating it.

If you really want your old-time appetite to return to you once more, take the practice of taking a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after each meal. Results will astound you.

The reason a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet is powerful enough to digest your next meal is because it is composed of those things which a weakened digestive system lacks.

The ingredients of these tablets digest 2,000 times its bulk in food. Think what a great assistance this kind of assistance on your part is to the worn-out nerves and juices of your stomach and intestines.

We cannot understand how the body really and cheerfully O.K.'s such help until after you see that the ordinary distress after eating no longer bothers you.

If all the stomach sufferers who have been relieved of their misery and have been restored to health by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets could be gathered together into one column, they would make a longer body of men, women and children than were ever gathered together on the globe.

This fact is so fact because no town is so small that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not to be found in its drug store. Wherever you may go, there you will find in every drug store Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, price, 50c per box.

A small trial package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will be mailed free to anyone addressing P. A. Stuart Co., 1610 Street Building, Marshall, Mich. (U.S.A.)

THE GLOBE TO CUT PRICES IN HALF

Sale to Start Wednesday Morning Promptly at 9 o'Clock

Have you heard the news that's going round? There's going to be a great clearance at The Globe Clothing Company's store this week, and the men who just love to see a dollar being a real dollar's worth are interested in the announcement.

You know The Globe and the quality of the clothes that The Globe sells. Well, there's going to be something doing down at 19 Whitehall street this week. A sale, you ask? No, not merely a sale. It's going to be a sale.

THE SALE OF THE YEAR
In the city of Atlanta—nothing like it before, and not much prospect of there being anything like it at any other store afterward. The Globe has long been known as "Atlanta's popular one-price store." And when others cut prices, The Globe sold clothing at the same, and at the same one-price which the goods had first been marked. Many of the men who have gone to The Globe, passing up other so-called "sales," for the simple reason that The Globe values were better values, at regular prices, than were many other "sale values."

But now it happens. Times change, you know, and merchants have a perfect right to change their minds with the times. The Globe has decided to cut prices, and as Mr. Einstein has said in a Journal representative last night, "When The Globe cuts prices we go to the limit." Think of it—the limit! Do you know what that means? It means PRICES CUT IN HALF!

Every suit and overcoat in the store will be sold, during the sale this week, just one-half the price they were formerly selling at. An opportunity! Well, just so see for yourself what an opportunity it really is. Think of a $30 suit being sold for $15 and a $40 suit for $20. But it's real—no "cut-price" and the men of Atlanta will have the opportunity this coming week.

The Globe will be closed all day Tuesday in the store for the biggest crowd in the history of this popular, long-established store. You men who have been saying you were going to buy a suit later, when prices dropped, now have the opportunity.

WATCH THE JOURNAL.
Full announcements of the extraordinary values to be had at this sale will appear in The Journal and the Evening Star. Watch for it, and take the step that advertisement will hand you.

ARAGON HOTEL TO OPEN RESTAURANT ON JAN. 16
Distinctively Southern Dishes Will Be Served at New Cafe

The Aragon hotel, one of the oldest and best known hotels in the South, will open a restaurant and cafe January 16, according to H. A. Tisdal, manager. Popular prices will prevail and distinctive Southern dishes will be served. The new restaurant will be a feature of the new hotel. The seating capacity will be 200 people.

A. J. Smith, a well-known hotel steward, will have charge of the restaurant. He has already begun making things in the kitchen. The new restaurant will be finished in natural wood. Mr. Tisdal, who has recently taken charge of the hotel, declared that it was his purpose, inasmuch as possible, to restore the original beauty of the hotel, and add modern conveniences and make it especially old-fashioned Southern hospitality brought up to date. Mr. Tisdal for 14 years has been in the hotel business in Georgia and has a number of friends.

Mr. Smith, who will be steward of the hotel, is well known in Atlanta. He opened the Winwood hotel and has lived in Atlanta several years. Since leaving this city he has been connected with the Hotel Greenwood, the St. Charles and the Deanehead in New Orleans. He has brought with him to Atlanta a force of cooks who will take charge of the Aragon kitchen. "It is our purpose to give, in the Aragon cafe, the best service and the best cooking at popular prices," he declared. "There will be no vaudeville—all of our energies will be directed toward giving the public their money's worth."

The date of the opening of the new cafe is Saturday, January 16.

ARCHITECTURAL AWARDS MADE TO TECH STUDENTS

In the judgment of the work done in the architectural department of the Georgia School of Technology, held in the department Friday, the following awards were made to the students whose work merited mention both for the designs presented and the best handling of the problem.

In the senior problem, which was a "Club House for the Faculty on a College Campus," Griswold M. Hill was given first mention and his work especially commended. Other commendation for their work.

The sketch problems of the seniors were especially interesting. The subject being "An Administration Building for the Art Society in the Built-in Washington." C. W. Fulwood and W. H. Kewick received first and second mentions, and G. M. Hill, W. P. Marshall and H. H. Jordan were given the other awards in the order named.

The sophomore problem, "A Central Motive for a Court House," was well handled and the following awards given: W. H. Holliman, first mention; W. P. Marshall, second mention; and H. H. Jordan, the second mention.

Saturday the seniors took the preliminary sketch for the second annual Southern Intercollegiate architectural competition which is held among the various southern colleges. This year the competition is being held under the auspices of Tulane university in New Orleans. The competition was held last year by Tech, and this year's class is anxious to uphold the reputation of the local college.

HEROES OF KROONLAND ARE PRESENTED MEDALS
(By Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—In recognition of their services in rescuing a large number of the passengers and crew of the steamer Volturno, which was burned at sea in October, 1912, William C. Redfield, secretary of commerce, will today present to Captain Paul Kriebel, of the steamer Kronland, a gold watch and medal, and to the second officer, Mansfield, and nineteen members of the Kronland crew, silver medals at the Philadelphia mint.

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

Miss Norma Phillips as June Moore, in the "Runaway June," the Romance serial which is now running in The Sunday Journal and appears at the Strand, Friday next.

THE ALPHA THEATER.

The Alpha will show the sixth episode of the "Master Key" Monday, as its opening attraction. During the week week a two reel "Big U" production entitled "On Desert Sands" will be shown. This photoplay depicts the early days of the West and is said to be the greatest "release" ever issued by a motion picture company in recent years.

ETHEL BARRYMORE AT THE MONTGOMERY.

In keeping with the harmony and tone of the Montgomery theater, the management announces Ethel Barrymore, the famous legitimate star, in a beautiful and dramatic photoplay entitled "The Nightingale." This production is being released in all the leading motion picture houses that are the habit of running all the best first night Broadway productions. It is needless to state that many people are regular patrons of moving picture theaters, will go to see Miss Barrymore at the Montgomery Thursday and Friday of this week. The opening attraction for the week will be "The Woman in Black," a Kluge and Klinger four-reel drama, of the highest quality. There will also be shown the Pathe weekly, depicting some of the latest war scenes. The orchestra music at this theater is in itself a decided attraction.

RUNAWAY JUNE.

A notable cast in the "Runaway June," the new Romance serial, which was especially written for the leading newspapers and the motion production by George Randolph Chester author of the famous "The Nightingale" serial. The scenario on which the fifteen installment photoplay of Runaway June is based, is by Marc Edmund Jones, creator of scores of successful motion picture plots, in cooperation with Oscar Reagin, the famous director of super-screen plays.

J. W. Johnston, who formerly played leads with Reagin, is to appear as Ned Warner, the young bridegroom in Runaway June. The role of June, herself, will be filled by Norma Phillips, who will be no introduction to Red Laffo readers. Old Aunt Debby, the negro in the Moore household, is played by character Mr. Chester has apparently loved writing about will be impersonated by Myra Brooke, who formerly distinguished herself in the company of the late Richard Mansfield. Winifred Burke will be seen as the avowed and vindictive Mrs. Hetherington, June's closest friend and Miss Evelyn Dunn has come all the way from Paris to play the part.

By George Randolph Chester and Lillian Chester

Is a thrilling story, a daring story, a tale of surprise and intrigue. It is written with all the mastery that made Mr. Chester famous.

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVESTOCK Commercial Poultry of the Farm

THE poultry industry of the United States during the past five years has been completely changed in all sections of the country. It is no longer a business of a few years ago, but a business of the future. A few years ago nearly every person who entered the poultry business was a beginner, and many expected to get rich. But now, the poultry business is a serious business, and many are making money out of it. Of course there is a cause for this, and this cause has been the fact that the poultry business is a business that can be made into a profitable one. The result is, every one of these people who are making money out of it, are making it by the same way. They are making it by the same way that the poultry business is a business that can be made into a profitable one. The result is, every one of these people who are making money out of it, are making it by the same way that the poultry business is a business that can be made into a profitable one.

Several large laying competitions have been conducted in different parts of the United States and these competitions have completely revolutionized poultry keeping and have practically eliminated the money on the one that would lay eggs regardless of how she looks. And, to secure these of this kind it requires scientific, careful, record-keeping and the ability to keep the birds in the best of health. And, to secure these of this kind it requires scientific, careful, record-keeping and the ability to keep the birds in the best of health. And, to secure these of this kind it requires scientific, careful, record-keeping and the ability to keep the birds in the best of health.

Another thing that this has done. It has practically eliminated the middle man from handling the best grade of eggs, especially from those egg farms, as they are now sold directly from the producer to the consumer. Every egg being guaranteed. The consumer can afford to pay a better price for the eggs because they receive them fresh from the producer every day and know positively that they are getting a good fresh egg and get what they pay for.

The time has come when our people in the south must do the same thing. They must do the same thing that the people in the north and west have done. They must do the same thing that the people in the north and west have done. They must do the same thing that the people in the north and west have done. They must do the same thing that the people in the north and west have done. They must do the same thing that the people in the north and west have done.

The poultry industry offers many opportunities to the rich and to the poor to earn a living on a small investment, and when the proper methods have been learned how to get the most out of their poultry, they can be made to pay, and it is only the hens that lay that are worth keeping. Regardless of how they look they are the ones that must be kept and are today the most profitable part of the poultry business.

Wholesalers Gratified At Way Business of New Year Has Opened Up

Not Only Are They Pleased
But Are in a Measure Surprised at the Firm Tone of Trade Everywhere in Evidence

Highly pleasing! That is the way the consensus of opinion of Atlanta's wholesalers at the good volume of orders that in which the business of the new year was opened up during the past week. The wholesalers are not only gratified but in a noticeable measure are surprised at the good volume of orders that have been received from their customers. The wholesalers are not only gratified but in a noticeable measure are surprised at the good volume of orders that have been received from their customers. The wholesalers are not only gratified but in a noticeable measure are surprised at the good volume of orders that have been received from their customers.

"We are highly pleased with the start business has made for the new year," said E. M. Hudson of McCord-Stewart company. "Our men are all of them at work and securing each of them a share of business. We note that we are enjoying a large number of new customers upon our books. This is always a sign of business expansion and we are gratified accordingly."

SILVEY CO. PLEASED.
"The business of the new year has certainly started out with a decided improvement over recent business conditions," said E. K. Ratner of John Silvey and company. "I expect business to gradually improve by the middle of the month. I will not be at all surprised if we have by that time reached normal stride."

"The business of the new year has opened up with us," said J. C. Matthews of Montag Brothers. "During the past week, as has been the case ever since the holidays, we have had a splendid mail order business. We are, too, letting us hear from with good orders. They have, however, been on the road only a few days now, but nevertheless indications are that we will enjoy a considerable increasing volume of business from them."

"Our salesmen are all out upon the road and hard at work," said I. A. Hirschberg of the Hirschberg company. "They are all sending in orders and we are gratified at the business we are receiving. Sales have been very good."

"Business is decidedly on the up-swing," said R. A. Hancock of the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company. "Orders have started off with a bang during the first days of the new year. I am certainly gratified at the way our business is going. And to cite the proof of my words, Mr. Hancock pointed to two, which were the first orders of his company's pickles and preserve products, to be delivered during the new year."

"H. M. Koppin of the S. P. Richards company was found by a firing line representative last week, busy at the pile high with orders which had been received from the company's traveling salesmen. "It certainly seems the old times," said Mr. Koppin, as he proceeded to get the orders in shape to be filled. "You can certainly state that we are pleased with the way the new year has opened."

"The first few days of the new year have been so good with us that they have served to rekindle the confidence of our salesmen, and all of them have gone to work with renewed energy and determination to make 1915 one of the best years of their lives," said Donald McKie of the H. H. Ringer company. "The way business opened up really surprised us, and we think it will be a good and show an increase in sales."

COLLECTIONS GOOD.
"Much to my surprise, our orders and collections during the first few days have been fine," said Loren Fort of Lamar and Rankin drug company. "I am certainly delighted with the way things have opened up here during the new year. I certainly begin to look like the old time with us. I think we are now on the road to a recovery from past depression."

"Listen to that music," said C. J. Sullivan of the M. C. Kiser company, when asked how the business of the new year had begun. "What you hear is the rattling of packing cases for goods to be shipped at once. We are receiving orders for immediate-shipment shoes that we can well take care of. All our salesmen are out and all have been heard from with very satisfactory business indeed. "Unprecedented conditions are very much gratified at the way the new year is beginning with us. Our salesmen are not only not confined to immediate-shipment orders altogether but we are receiving a generous portion of orders for goods for spring delivery."

"Reports from our salesmen since the first of the year have been fine," said

CAR OF BULL TRACTORS ARRIVE AT WOODRUFF CO.

Two of Machines Are on Exhibition at Company's Display Rooms

Those Bull tractor have arrived at the display rooms of the Woodruff Machinery Manufacturing company at 70 South Forsyth street. A pair of them came from Minneapolis, Minn., to the Woodruff company last week. Two machines are now on exhibition at the display rooms, and have attracted crowds every day since they were put in position.

The tractors are light gasoline engines for the purpose of drawing plows or vehicles about the farm, and for any other work to which a gasoline engine may be put. The Woodruff company has the general agency for the states of Georgia and Florida and are now asking dealers in these states to communicate with them with a view to contracts being made with the Woodruff company for local agencies.

The Woodruff company on January 5 exhibited one of their tractors on the streets of Winder, Ga. It was the occasion of the election of officers for the new county of Barrow, of which Winder is the county seat. No election districts having been designated, all the voters of the new county cast their votes at the town of Winder. Three thousand or more people were present and the tractor as it passed about the streets attracted a great deal of attention.

There will be a demonstration of the tractor near Atlanta on Thursday, January 14 and also a demonstration at Winder, Ga., on Saturday, January 16.

W. C. Barnwell of Ragan-Malone, company. "Trade is improving right along and we expect it to get better as the year advances. Our orders during the past week have been confined to immediate-shipment goods entirely, but we have a number of orders for spring goods. I am very much pleased at the start of the new year."

"The opening week of the new year was good with us," said Charles Perry, general sales manager of the K. O. R. Shoe company. "We are hearing from our customers and they are sending in some good business. All reports we have had from them state that the outlook for the new year is bright and we expect to do good business on their spring line with a considerable increasing volume of business from them."

"The first week of the new year found us receiving orders and we are all traveling salesmen but mail orders as well," said J. O. O'Donnell of Dobbs & Key Co. "Conditions are generally improving, people are feeling better and we are getting over the business depression and business grouches."

CHAMBERS DELIGHTED.
"We are highly pleased with the way business opened up with us," said J. O. Chambers of Brown, Ferguson & Greene Co. "It looks like there is going to be something good going in the business of the new year. We have received a number of nice orders from our salesmen."

"We are highly pleased with the way our business opened up during the past week," said J. N. McWalter of Hilder-Williamson-Wyatt company. "We had some nice shoe trade and some nice orders from our traveling men. Conditions now point to very favorable business during the spring."

"The first week of the new year was good with us," said E. L. Adams of E. L. Adams company. "It was a fine start both in sales and collections. If cotton keeps on at eight cents, I see no reason why we should not have a business approaching an old time."

"The first week of the new year was certainly a splendid one with us," said W. O. Stamps of Paine & Stamps. "I am greatly pleased with the way business has opened up. Last Tuesday, I may state, we had the biggest day's business we have had since the first of last August. If cotton will only remain around eight cents and if the weather will remain open it is now, we will certainly see a vast recovery in business within a short time."

"Business picked up with us at least 50 per cent last week," said E. P. Lewis of McClure-Ten-Ten company. "We look for a fine business during January and February."

PROGRESSIVE GA. RETAIL FIRM HAS NEW BUILDING

Edmondson-Christopher Co.,
of LaGrange, Ga., Believes in Atlanta Market

The note of progress is sounded strongly in the history of the growth and expansion of the Edmondson-Christopher company, retail merchandise firm of LaGrange, Ga. In spite of the war and the resulting business depression, this firm has recently completed a handsome new store building and equipped it with a big stock of up-to-date merchandise. The firm is one of the largest and most enterprising mercantile firms in the state. It handles dry goods, shoes, hats, notions and dress goods.

No small part of the success of the firm, its heads attribute to the fact that they have generally patronized the Atlanta wholesale market. They declare that the nearby market offers vast advantages over those located in distant sections of the country. By the use of the facilities which the Atlanta wholesalers possess, they are always prepared to keep their stock fresh-supplied with the latest and best to be found on the market.

J. H. Edmondson, who is the president and general manager of the firm, is widely known as a liberal settler buyer and handles a vast quantity of the staple each season. He is head of the Security Warehouse company and the Electric glennery. R. L. Christopher is vice president of the firm and has been uninterruptedly connected with it and associated with Mr. Edmondson since business for twenty-six years. The entire company is composed of alert, wide-awake business men, who have advanced their firm to its present eminent position in the mercantile world.

Editor Firing Line:
On Saturday night, January 2, Fulton Council 555 held its first meeting in the new year and we celebrated it by enjoying a fine smoker. Every councilor present enjoyed himself and gave thanks for the privilege of attending this meeting. The members were there in great numbers. After many matters of great concern had been dispensed and the speaker enjoyed every one resulted to be on the firing line much stronger this year than any time heretofore.

A rising vote of thanks was given Ed Morehead for his donation of the King's cigarette to the company. He smoked that the invitation to repeat another new year is open.

Atlanta T. P. A.'s Are All Agog With Entertainment Plans for State Meeting

GRAND LAKE COMPANY ESTABLISHES WAREHOUSE

Big Paper Firm Makes Atlanta
One of Its Distributing Points

The Grand Lake company, paper manufacturers, of Woodbury, Maine, have established a warehouse in Atlanta under the management of T. J. Monroe, who was formerly president of the Consolidated Paper company, and one of the most widely known paper men in the South. The Grand Lake company is one of the largest manufacturers of paper bags and toilet paper in the country. They have warehouses and offices in Chicago, Minneapolis and Baltimore, and on account of the increasing demand for their goods in the South they have decided with the coming of the new year, to establish a warehouse here.

The company here, under Mr. Monroe's management, will solicit trade from jobbers exclusively. Two salesmen are already upon the road for the new concern. They are R. T. Ivey and J. G. Morrison. The Atlanta warehouse and office are located in the L. & N. freight building.

Under the able management of Mr. Monroe the Grand Lake company's products will undoubtedly become more popular and more widely in demand in the South than ever before.

HARRY MCCORD NOW COVERING ALA. TERRITORY

Former Member of House
Force Now on Road
for McCord Co.

H. Y. McCord, Jr., will start on the road Monday for McCord-Stewart company, covering the state of Alabama. Mr. McCord's headquarters will likely be at Anniston. For a number of years Mr. McCord has been a member of the office force and is familiar with the duties of a traveling salesman. From having filled that position from time to time, substituting for members of the road staff. A big share of success will undoubtedly be his in his new position.

BIG DEMAND FOR "UNCLE SAM" BREAD

"There are never hard times around a live live—and there are not any hard times at the Schlessinger-Meyer Baking company, in which people have no work. When the hard-time scare came along because of the outbreak of the war, we did not allow it to affect us—we did not lay off any help—we kept our full force at work supplying the demand for Uncle Sam bread—and we are mighty glad that we are now showing substantial and constant gain."

Delegates Representing Georgia Division of Travelers' Protective Association Will Gather in Atlanta on April 8 and 9 for Annual Convention—Will be the Guests of Post B

The 1915 convention of the Travelers' Protective association will be held in Atlanta on April 8 and 9. This was determined at a meeting of the association held in Savannah, Ga., on January 2, when E. D. McDonald, Atlanta director, in behalf of Post B, presented the invitation for the next state convention to meet in Atlanta. The invitation was unanimously accepted and all Georgia T. P. A.'s are looking forward to big things when they gather here, in April.

Already the membership of Post B is agog with the discussion of plans and preparations for the entertainment of the visitors. The next meeting of Post B will be held on January 15, when J. H. Anderson, post secretary, at that meeting will appoint a number of committees, who will plan the program of entertainment and arrangement of committees, who will plan the program and work out all the details necessary to make the visiting T. P. A.'s have the best time of their lives.

Atlanta T. P. A.'s have been keen to secure a state convention for several years, and they are determined that it shall be a memorable event in the history of the organization in Georgia. They trust that every member of Post B will be on hand at our next meeting, when plans for the convention will be set under way. We expect our convention to arouse a splendid spirit of enthusiasm among the members of our local post which will, we estimate, rebound to the interest of the Travelers' Protective association in this city, and the results of which will last for years to come.

PARKER AND WALKER HAD SPLENDID WEEK'S TRADE

W. B. Simpson, of Jones Bros. and company, spent last week on a sales trip to Augusta and neighboring points. J. S. Lee, of this company, is away on a trip to Florida.

J. D. Simmons, who travels out of Rome, Ga., for McCord-Stewart company, last week made a trip to Edinburg, Ga., to visit relatives. "Mr. Simmons did not fail to stop over and visit Marietta both going and coming," said E. M. Hudson, sales manager of the company. "This was not because Mr. Simmons had any customers at Marietta, but because he likes Marietta—think it is a fine town."

J. E. Morrison, of the A. M. Robinson company, sold a fine opening bill to a Florida merchant on last Friday.

Among the visitors and patrons at the Lamar & Hankin Drug Co. during the past week were: Dr. Bodie, Chipp, Dr. W. H. Aycock, Melen, Dr. R. L. Tye, McDonough, Geo. R. Standfield, Lovelady, Geo. J. B. White, Wootley, Geo. Dr. A. F. White, Flovilla, Ga., Colonel W. W. D. Dixon, Marietta, Ga.

Frank Corry, who was the first salesman of John Silver & Co. to get out on the road for the business of the new year, was heard from last week. "A fine list of orders. He had engagements with a number of leading clients in his territory right after Christmas and succeeded in landing some good business for his house."

J. L. Shipp, secretary and manager of the Moxala company, of Mobile, Ala., was in the city during the past week a few days. Mr. Shipp was here in the interest of securing an agency to handle Moxala in Atlanta. Mr. Shipp, however, is also a well known soda fountain and soda water man with a wide experience and acquaintance in Georgia. He was for a time manager of Robert Greene & Sons in Atlanta.

C. W. McClure, of McClure Ten-Cent company, spent Saturday on a quail hunt near Atlanta.

W. O. Stamps, of Pains & Stamps, who spent a few days in the city, leaving the territory formerly covered by J. C. Owens, declares he had a fine time and likes the road so much better than the office that he intends to go some all this week.

L. C. Freeman, representing the Chesapeake Coffee company, of Nashville, Tenn., spent the past week working the trade with P. S. Downes, who is the E. L. Adams company. They both report a successful week's trip.

J. L. Pollock, of the A. M. Robinson company, was receiving congratulations last week from the house of food and victuaries. He is the father of a ten-pound girl, born January 5.

R. M. Tallichet, who represents the Porto Rican-American Tobacco company, is working the trade in the interest of his company's products with the traveling force of the Capital City Cigar company.

R. B. McWhorter, of Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, sold a nice opening bill in the house on last week.

J. M. Lanier, of the Atlanta Coffee Mills company, spent several days last week on a hunting trip in south Georgia. He combined a portion of business with his outing.

Edwin C. Bell, of the Brower Candy company, made a fine score on the campaign target last week. Mr. Bell has sold new territory that grows to be invincible, to that regularly covered by him. He is having good success since the holidays.

There were no "lins" at Pains & Stamps on Saturday morning. All of the travelers were out on the jump for business.

F. S. Singer, of Lumpkin, Ga., Vice-president of H. L. Singer company, was a visitor in Atlanta last week, being the guest of H. L. Singer.

J. W. O'Donnell, of Dobbs & Wey Co., will leave Monday for his southwest Georgia territory. This is Mr. O'Donnell's first trip since the holidays.

The following travelers of the Hagan-Milne company distinguished themselves by the large volume of business which they turned in for the first week of the new year. Morris Croft, who travels the West Point road, Carl Hanes, who makes nearly points, and Sam Hanes, who covers the Georgia road.

JOHN YATES DOES SOME FINE EMBROIDERY WORK

John Yates, who travels north Georgia for Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, distinguished himself the first week of the new year. Every mail last week seemed to bring orders from him. His sales of embroideries and embroidery work were especially large.

B. G. MORRISON, JR., IS NEW J. K. ORR TRADER

B. G. Morrison, Jr., is the new Mississippi traveler of the J. K. Orr Shoe company. His headquarters are in Meridian, Miss., and he covers the territory formerly traveled by B. J. Clark, who resigned to enter the retail trade.

J. J. BARNES, JR., HEADS NEW WHOLESALE CIGAR CO.

Will Make Specialty of Distributing the '44' Cigar—Begins Campaign

J. J. BARNES, JR.

The J. J. Barnes Cigar company is the name of Atlanta's latest wholesale cigar firm. The head of the company, J. J. Barnes, Jr., was for more than twelve years with the National Biscuit company, and was six years manager of that company's business in Atlanta and Macon. Mr. Barnes was more recently with the H. L. Schlesinger company here.

The firm will do a wholesale cigar business, making its leader the "44" cigar manufactured by the Forty-Four Cigar company, of Philadelphia, Pa. "The '44' cigar is known all over the south, but has never been put on the Atlanta market," said Mr. Barnes. "In seven out of twelve of the large towns which I traveled in the south I found the '44' cigar was the leading seller."

Tillman Funk, the specialty man of the Forty-Four Cigar company, will arrive in Atlanta early next week," said Mr. Barnes, "and he and myself will begin to put on an active introductory campaign for the '44' cigar."

Mr. Barnes is widely known to the trade in Atlanta and throughout Georgia. All of his friends predict for him a big success in his new business.

THOSE MCLELLAN PEACH PIES ARE PIES DE LUXE

Made From First California Peaches to Come Through Panama Canal

"See that peach pie," said W. B. McClellan, manager of the McClellan Bakery company, pointing to a big pie from which one delicious wedge had been removed. The removal revealed the fact that the contents of the pie consisted of fine, large, luscious looking peaches.

It could be seen at once that this was no ordinary peach pie. Peach pie is always delicious, no matter how carefully made nor how indifferent the material, but it was readily apparent that this peach pie was a peach pie de luxe. "The main reason that pie shows up so well," said Mr. McClellan, "is the fact that the peaches of which it is made are of the best California variety. A large shipment of these peaches were sent to us direct from California last November, coming to Atlanta by way of the Panama canal, and the peaches were in fine condition. The original flavor is maintained, and when it is sliced, therefore, it becomes a delicacy and a treat indeed."

Mr. McClellan is famous for his pies all over the south. His bakery supplies every dining car out of Atlanta and the Pullman company, and he has a large list of customers in and out of Atlanta. Mr. McClellan has been in the baking business in Atlanta for nine years. His specialty is pies, although his company makes a fine line of bread and cakes—in fact, everything to be found in a modern bakery.

REVSON EXTENDS TIME FOR PRIZE CONTEST

January 20 Is Named As Limit for B. K. T. Articles to Be Submitted

"It will be quite difficult, I assure you," said Frank Revson to a Firing Line representative "for me to speak of a long time, due to my reading some of the answers to our contest. We have received quite a stock of verses, a number of which really are fairly good poetry. I'm not a judge of this contest) but, for instance, this snatches of pretty good stuff, doesn't it?" and he quoted the following:

"Remove the care, the work,
The grime,
Shorten the hours devoted
To work,
Lengthen the minutes of Gladness sublime."

—By B. K. P.
"Because of the extensive interest, and because we believe others too busy during the holidays have not had opportunity to send in their efforts, we have extended the limiting day to Jan. 20. There is abundant time for those interested to try their luck."
"Since the first of this month, business has picked up considerably, and war or no war, we expect the coming season to give us another 15 per cent increase in sales."

When the IDEA Is Bigger Than The Goods

Ever notice the advertising of the Victor Talking Machine people?

It illustrates just what we mean.

Instead of harping on the superior merits of this particular instrument, it branches apparently away from that and features the "music in the home" idea.

They give us superb and costly double pages in color, showing the whole family assembled, listening rapturously to the music, while in the background float the familiar figures of golden-voiced opera singers.

They picture for us a gay company in the home, dancing to the music of a motionless orchestra—locked up in the Victor cabinet.

The machine itself is apparently subordinated to the Big Idea.

Great advertising, though. Sells Victor products.

Similarly, we find a big insurance company playing up the "widow and orphan" idea. The little lad out selling papers and the sad-faced woman bending over the sewing machine are pictured pathetically, while the display type boldly asks "Is this YOUR family?"

The name of the company is made secondary. The Big Thought is "safety first." And it gets over.

Tooth powder and paste people are regular dentists nowadays. They talk about the danger and dreadfulness of neglecting the teeth. They give statistics and comparisons. They talk teeth and teeth-safety until you can't escape their arguments.

And incidentally you buy what they are trying to sell you.

Recently a big garment manufacturer put on a costly campaign for a certain product of his factory that was sure to be a fad—to go out with other fashions of the hour.

It was one of the Patrick Mackinaw garments.

Said the manager of this particular campaign:

"During the craze we spent our money and effort in 'advertising insurance.' When our mill was swamped with orders we doubled our appropriation and our efforts, in order to nourish the solid, substantial, permanent part of the demand which we knew would remain when the whimsical part of the demand had departed. We advertised the benefits and joys of the rugged outdoor existence—the health and sanity propaganda. And this nourished the substantial demand for ALL our fabrics and warm wearables."

To paraphrase the company's own "bigger than weather" slogan, its advertising policy was "bigger than its goods."

Lots of people wonder why we manufacturers who send out these Firing Line Bulletins week after week do it.

Because, Bud, the IDEA of getting the people to patronize HOME MANUFACTURERS is the biggest thing before the South today.

That's why. We talk loyalty, because we believe in it and because if you believe with us, we'll eventually sell you the goods.

We've got the grit and the nerve to tell our neighbors how we feel about it and to ask them to buy HOME GOODS AT HOME.

The Loyalty idea is the big thing in this section now.

Keeping the dollars on duty in Dixie is the patriotic thing for every one of us to be doing.

That's what we've after.

And we're ready to handle your orders—whenever you say so.

Barnwell-Ryder

One of the prettiest weddings of the season was that of Miss Martha Ryder and Mr. William H. Barnwell, Jr., which took place Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Ryder, at Ponce de Leon avenue.

The bridegroom's father, Rev. William H. Barnwell, of South Carolina, performed the impressive ceremony and the wedding attendants included Miss Helen Thorne, maid of honor; Miss Emily Caslin, bridesmaid; Miss Elizabeth Caslin, bridesmaid; Miss Elizabeth Black, bridesmaid; Miss Christine Johnson, bridesmaid; Mr. John Barnwell, best man; Mr. John Barnwell, best man; Mr. Robert Barnwell and Mr. Julian Barnwell, groomsmen.

The bride and Mr. Ryder were assisted in receiving by the bridegroom's parents, and Mr. Marjorie Fletcher and Miss Caroline Hooper, served punch.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnwell left for a wedding trip to points of interest in Florida, and upon their return will be at home with the bride's parents at Ponce de Leon avenue.

Dean-Wallons

MARIETTA, Ga.—Miss Alice Wallons and Mr. Linton Dean were married on Tuesday evening at the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. R. H. Northcutt, on Church street.

The bride was the twenty-eighth wedding anniversary of the bride's parents and Mr. Dean officiated at both ceremonies.

The home was decorated with wild anemones and growing ferns. An improvised altar in the parlor was banked with ferns and white candles. Six white pedestals wreathed with anemones and white roses of white roses formed an aisle to the altar. The bride's table was decorated in deep pink carnations and lilies of the valley with streamers of white tulle from the electric lights.

The bride was given in marriage by her cousin, Mr. Ralph Northcutt, and the groom was escorted by his brother, Mr. Dean.

The maid of honor was Miss Jean Wallace, a cousin of the bride.

The bride wore a white satin with a train embroidered in pearls, the white chiffon skirt of plaited flared in silver and plain white tulle with a train of pearls and silver.

Miss Wallace wore cream brocade with white tulle and pink velvet. The train edged with brown fur. Her bouquet was of pink roses and white lilies.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Dean left for a tour of Florida and later will be at home in Woodstock.

Bowman-Stroud

BARNESVILLE.—The wedding of Miss Lucy Stroud, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Stroud, and Dr. Robert E. Bowman, of Brownwood, was held Wednesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. J. M. Tunlin officiating. Only the relatives and close friends were present.

The living room where the ceremony was performed was decorated with palm garlands of anemones, and white palms on either side of the altar.

Miss Wallace, who was the maid of honor, wore pink silk and carried carnations.

Mr. W. W. Bowman, brother of the groom, was best man.

Mr. W. E. Jackson played the wedding march and during the ceremony was accompanied by Miss Sarah Stroud.

The bride's gown was of white tulle, trimmed with black fur, which was worn with a hat of the same shade as the flowers were bride roses.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Bowman left for their home in Brownwood.

Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. J. C. Howard, Mrs. J. H. Pitts, Miss Annie Anderson, Mrs. C. J. Lester, Mrs. W. H. Howard, Mrs. C. E. Suggs, Mrs. T. O. Galloway, Miss Eleanor Gray, Miss Alice Corry, Miss Roselyn Leaser, Miss Lela Stroud and Miss Sarah Stroud.

Burton-Barrett

ACWORTH, Ga.—A very pretty home wedding was that of Miss Edna Barrett and Mr. John H. Burton, Jr., which took place December 30, at four o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Burton, in green and white, many candles giving a soft light over the rooms and reception hall.

Miss Nell Lovington and Miss Maude Hillyer, courted chocolate and Miss Edna Mitchell, Miss Annie Lee McGee, Miss Frances Tipton and Miss Edna Barrett, were bridesmaids. Mr. John H. Burton, Jr., was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Colman, sisters of the bride, also assisted.

Before the ceremony Mrs. L. M. A. W. was given "Rebecca," accompanied by Miss Gene Smith Mitchell, the maid of honor, with Eden Colman, the little sister, proceeded to the altar, where the ceremony was performed.

The bride was met by the groom and his best man, Mr. Frank Burton, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. W. A. Chaskey.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Burton left for Athens, where they will make their home.

Alexander-Weimer

Mr. and Mrs. Weimer celebrated the marriage of their daughter, Margaret Amelia, to Mr. W. D. Alexander, Jr., on Monday, January 4.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. A. Chaskey.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mr. W. D. Alexander, Jr., and the groom was escorted by his brother, Mr. W. D. Alexander, Jr.

The bride wore a white tulle gown with a train of pearls and silver.

Miss Wallace, who was the maid of honor, wore cream brocade with white tulle and pink velvet.

The train edged with brown fur. Her bouquet was of pink roses and white lilies.

The public is cordially invited.

Club Dance

A pleasant event of the week will be a dance given Tuesday evening at the Jewish Educational Alliance building, by the Societe de la Danse.

The club has given earlier in the season several affairs, all of which have been largely attended.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

WHILE still in the depths of winter rumors are current of many interesting engagements shortly to be announced, the wedding to take place in the spring. Several of these announcements will occasion more than the usual interest because of the prominence of the contracting parties. June for so long has been called the month of brides, but within the past few years the beautiful month of April in this southern climate has vied with the month of roses in popularity and has been selected for many of the spring weddings. Of interest to many friends will be the announcement of the engagement of Miss Ann Elsie Stewart and Mr. James Perry Champion, of Albany. The wedding will be a beautiful event of the early spring at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Caroline Robinson Stewart, on West Peachtree street. Miss Stewart is a girl of charming and attractive personality. Following her graduation at Vassar she spent much time in travel abroad and in the study of art. Mr. Champion is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Champion, prominent residents of south Georgia, who are making their home in Albany, where the bridegroom elect is identified with cotton interests. The engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Elsie Brown and Mr. George Andrew Nicolson, Jr., will be of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends. The young bride elect, who is the daughter of Mrs. George W. Brown, combines with a very unusual brunette beauty a grace and charm of personality that has made her one of the very attractive members of the younger set. Mr. Nicolson, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Nicolson, is popular in the insurance and the club circles of the city.

Reception For Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Brieux

Eugene Brieux, the noted French dramatist, and his wife, will be interesting visitors in Atlanta during February. Mr. and Mrs. Brieux will spend February 5 and 6 in the city and during their stay the members of the Alliance Francaise will entertain at a reception in their honor which will be one of the largest events of the season. Perhaps the best known work of an author during recent years was the play "Damaged Goods," which was presented in Atlanta during the past year. During his stay Mr. Brieux will lecture before the Alliance on "The Drama."

Eggnog Party

Mrs. W. D. Thurmond entertained at an eggnog party Wednesday evening, at her home in Inman Park. The house was artistically decorated with spruce boughs and cut flowers and during the evening cards and dancing were enjoyed.

Those present were Miss Vee Strickland, Miss Jewel Gardner, Miss Clarence Forster, Miss Valma Gardner, Miss Bessie Hollowell, Miss Elizabeth Johnston, Miss Edith Lee Terrell, Miss Annie Hood, Mr. Harry Pratt, Mr. Andrew Garner, Mr. Omer Whitten, Mr. Carl Simpson, Mr. Fred Gordett, Mr. C. Carson, Mr. Melvin Smith, Mr. Clarence Hill and Mr. and Mrs. Jamie Watson.

Carefully Treat Children's Colds

Neglect of children's colds often lays the foundation of serious lung trouble in later life. On the other hand, it is harmful to continually dose delicate little stomachs with internal medicines or to keep the children always indoors. The ideal way to avoid colds is to keep plenty of fresh air in the bedroom and at the first sign of trouble apply Vick's "Vapo-Rub" Croup and Cough Remedy. Save over the throat and chest, covering with a warm flannel cloth. The body heat releases antiseptic vapors that are inhaled all night long, opening the air passages and healing the inflamed membrane. In addition, Vick's is absorbed through the skin, taking out the soreness and tightness. Vick's contains no harmful drugs whatever. At drug stores—25c, 50c and $1.00.

Silver Rain

The rain that fell yesterday is ruby on the roses.
Silver on the poplar leaf and gold on willow stem;
The grief that changed a yesterday is silver that encloses
Holy loves where time and chance shall never trouble them.
The rain that fell yesterday makes all the hillside gladden
Coral on the laurel and berry on the grass;
The grief that changed a yesterday has taught a soul to listen
For whispers of eternity in all the winds that pass.
O faint of heart, storm beaten, this rain will gleam tomorrow
Flame within the columbine and jewels on the thorn,
Heaven in the forget-me-not; though sorrow now be sorrow,
Yet sorrow shall be beauty in the magic of the morn.
—British Weekly.

ATHENS

TALENTED YOUNG GIRL

ATHENS—One of the most delightful of the New Year's festivities was a series of dances given on New Year's eve at which a number of the Athens boys entertained the visiting girls. The dance was given at the Kappa Sigma chapter house on Prince avenue and was the most enjoyable affair. The chaperones were Mrs. Walter Childs, Mrs. D. P. Hasleton and Miss Hattie Brumby. Miss Carolyn Cobb has returned to Athens, after spending the holidays with her mother, Mrs. Howell Cobb. Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson Wardlaw, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Briggs, have returned to their home in Birmingham. Mr. Henry Tompkins, of Yale, and Mr. Lawrence Tompkins, of Lawrenceville, N. J., left the latter part of the week for Washington to visit Mrs. Edgar Fortson. The Messrs. Tompkins, with Mrs. Palmer, of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Waldemar Schmittman, of Long Island; and Miss Mildred Fortson, of Washington, have been delightfully entertained at a family home party given by Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Fortson at their home on Millidge avenue. Mr. and Mrs. George Coleman have returned from an extended trip to Florida.

One of the lovely affairs of the holidays was the morning bridge at which Mrs. George Ranken and Miss Aurelia Gifford entertained in honor of Miss Gifford's home and her guest, Miss Eleanor Thornton, of Kansas City. The top score prize was won by Miss Meadow Gifford, and the honoree was also presented with a dainty guest prize. Miss Thornton, who is a popular Lucy Cobb student, will also visit Miss Anne Winship Bates in Athens before the resuming of school. Congressman and Mrs. Sam F. Tribble left Wednesday for Washington, D. C., to be gone two months. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Dick, who have been their guests, have returned to Atlanta. Mr. Barrington Flanagan and his two guests, Mr. Carpenter, of Rome, and Mr. Duffy, of Macon, have returned to West Point, after spending the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Plamondon. Miss Julia Brand left the latter part of the week to be with her sister, Miss Louella Brand, who is ill at the Piedmont sanatorium in Atlanta. Dr. and Mrs. McMillan, of Macon, who have been the guests of their son, Dr. Hubbard McMillan, for the holidays, returned to their home Saturday. Dr. McMillan leaves soon for New Orleans and where there will be a stay of several months.

Shorter College Notes

ROME—The exercises of Shorter were resumed after two weeks' vacation for the Christmas holidays, on Tuesday morning, January 5. Miss Florida Parrish, who has been added to the musical faculty of Shorter, reached home on Monday last and has entered upon her duties as director of the voice department. Dr. Van Housen went to New York during the holidays to secure a teacher for the voice department. He met many teachers, but liked Miss Parrish because of her unusual brilliancy and beauty of her voice, and her splendid reputation as a teacher. Already the department has increased to such an extent that Miss Parrish will be compelled to have another assistant.

Among the new students who have recently registered are Miss Beesie Coy, Bristol, Va.; Miss Sylvia Smith, Marysville, Ga.; Miss Nannan Norman, Norman Park, Ga.; Miss Lucille Dickey, Cordele, Ga.; Miss Josephine Debridge, Natusale, Ala.; Miss Laura Belle Lawrence, Colquhoun, Ga.; and Miss Ruth Christensen, Whigham, Ga. The new students do not begin until January 19, at which time other new students will enter. On next Monday evening Miss Cora Lee Smith, of the department of expression, will give an impressive recitation Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew." Miss Smith is a most excellent reader and those who hear her may expect a treat.

Miss Frances Cronkrite, the accomplished head of the theoretical department of the conservatory, has returned from a delightful visit to the homes of several of her pupils. During the holidays she spent time with Mrs. Louis Bennett, of Quitman, Ga., and Miss Edna Root, of Plant City, Fla.

CAR SCHEDULES BEFORE RAIL BOARD WEDNESDAY

Commission to Hold Monthly
Hearings on Petitions This Week

Regular monthly hearings on petitions filed with the state railroad commission will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. There are thirteen petitions before the commission.

Chief interest in these hearings, so far as the citizens of Atlanta are concerned, centers in the petition of the Georgia Railway and Power company for authority to rearrange its schedules on a number of its spooler car lines in Atlanta by taking off the tripper cars now operated during the rush hours of each day.

Following is the docket of the commission for the three days' hearings:

TUESDAY, JANUARY TENTH.

Petition of the Macon, Dublin and Savannah Railroad company et al., for revision of classification rating on cross ties.

Petition of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad company for authority to revise interterminal charges at Brunswick, Georgia.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY ELEVEN.

Petition of the Central of Georgia Railway company for authority to discontinue service at Young, Georgia.

Petition of the Central of Georgia Railway company for authority to discontinue service at Young, Georgia.

Petition of the Southern Express company for authority to discontinue service at Young, Georgia.

Petition of the Georgia Railway and Power company for authority to revise rates on the city of Atlanta.

Raymond Hitchcock Promises to Be Treat of the Season—
"Today" Plays Return
Dates—Good Vaudeville at Forsyth

The attraction at the Atlanta, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday with the "Beauty Shop" is a new offering of George Broadhurst and Abraham Schomer, the excellent cast with features that would be a credit to any vaudeville "chamber along Broadway."

"Today" is a combination of eleven ladies and gentlemen each an expert musical artist in either vocal or instrumental cleavage. Producer Hoffa has provided a stage setting that is most attractive and the wardrobe consists of gowns and suits of the style used in Colonial days. The program will consist of popular and classic musical numbers, and will be a treat for those who are not musically informed, while the musicians will enjoy a desert that will be refreshing.

There is a great interest in the engagement of pretty Claire Rochester, the Atlanta girl who has made good in vaudeville. Since her debut in Atlanta about a year ago she has had the distinction of headlining the bill at Hammerstein's in New York for three consecutive weeks, and of playing in headline position at two different theaters in the big city.

Will Rogers, the cowboy comedian, is on the bill. That means that the theater goers will have a good many real reasons to laugh. He was first seen in vaudeville in Atlanta three years ago; then he came back as a special feature of the Blanche Ring company; Vaughan Comfort and John King, who have been seen here with Evans, Dickster, Fields and other big musical productions, always saw features have been in vaudeville two seasons presenting a comedy sketch that gives the artists excellent opportunity for best work. Bertie Beaumont, one of vaudeville's beauties and Jack Arnold, a clever comedian will offer a sketch "The Doctor" written by Arnold.

present his "Colonial Days" as the headliner for this week at the Forsyth. And the booking managers have surrounded the excellent cast with features that would be a credit to any vaudeville "chamber along Broadway."

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT OPPOSED BY SOCIETY

(By Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—A communication was made today of the incorporation of the American Society for the Abolition of Capital Punishment, which is the abolition of the death penalty in New York state.

George Foster Peck, president of the society, said that the society was organized for the purpose of opposing capital punishment in New York state. He said that the society was organized for the purpose of opposing capital punishment in New York state.

WOMEN SUFFER FROM WAR

Thousands of women of Europe are left destitute, unprotected and in misery.

The hearts of the women of America go out to their sisters in Europe who are left in misery and want. American women often suffer from derangements that are purely feminine. At the first symptoms of any derangement of the feminine organism at any period of life the one safe, reliable, helpful remedy is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It is a woman's medicine and as such its mighty and marvelous restorative power is acknowledged the country over.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a true friend to women in times of trial and at times of pain when the organs are not performing their functions. For headache, backache, hot flashes, neural condition, bearing down sensation, mental depression, nervousness, falling spells, lassitude and exhaustion women should never fail to take this tried and true woman's medicine.

It is not a secret remedy for all the ailments are printed on each box, sold in either tablet or liquid form.

A GREAT BOOK EVERY WOMAN SHOULD HAVE

If you will pay the mailing charges which are but a trifle, says Dr. Pierce, "I will send you my cloth bound book of over 1,000 pages with color plates and numerous illustrations and will not charge you a penny for the book itself."

Over a million copies of "The Woman's Common Sense Medical Adviser" are now in the hands of the people. It is a book that is a true friend to women in times of trial and at times of pain when the organs are not performing their functions. For headache, backache, hot flashes, neural condition, bearing down sensation, mental depression, nervousness, falling spells, lassitude and exhaustion women should never fail to take this tried and true woman's medicine.

Send 20 cents in stamps for mailing charges to Dr. Pierce, Littlefield, Buffalo, N. Y., and enclose this notice and you will receive by return mail all charges prepaid, this valuable

Many Doctors Here Oppose "Twilight" Sleep As Perilous

Four Were Interviewed and Agreed That
It Is Dangerous for Mother and Child

By Angus Perkerson

THE "twilight" sleep, which seeks relief from pain in a drowsy numbness, from which the mother is to wake with no memory of suffering, is opposed by many Atlanta physicians as not only unwise but also dangerous.

Four whose opinion was sought last week agreed that it imperils both the mother and the child, and one said that several deaths here have resulted from it.

The "twilight" sleep is induced by scopolamin, a drug long used, and in a condition in which the mother is unconscious of pain.

Seldom has the actual sleep, which is characteristic of the treatment at Freiburg, Germany, been attempted here. Scopolamin, for the most part, has been used sparingly in Atlanta; and a coma, which carries the mother past consciousness, has been infrequent.

The belief that the "twilight" sleep has been used here often in the last few months is in error. Only sufficient drugs to induce a tendency toward the lapse of consciousness, seem to have been employed.

"Twilight" Sleep Is Tried Six Times At Grady Hospital

Physicians, almost without exception, think that actual forgetfulness, except in a hospital with every equipment, is a peril to the life of both mother and child. In six instances the actual "twilight" sleep has been tried at Grady hospital, with neither good nor bad results. But in one or two less fortunate cases treated in the home, where the sleep of forgetfulness was sought, the result is said to have been fatal.

None of the four doctors who were interviewed last week would allow their names to be used; and the one who criticized it most severely made only the general charge that it has caused mortality. But without doubt the medical opinion here is that the "twilight" sleep—by which is meant an actual forgetfulness—is a danger.

An Atlanta doctor who has studied in Germany said:

"Scopolamin, the drug used, is valuable and treacherous. You never can be sure of exactly how much you are giving. You can never hope for continued success except in a hospital where all conditions are favorable."

"Scopolamin is not a new drug. It was advocated in 1902, and was tried by all big European clinics; and, as a means of inducing 'twilight' sleep, has since been rejected by them."

"I know of no place in Germany or any other part of Europe, except Freiburg, where this sleep is sought to avoid the 'great pain.' There they claim to have the drug in purer form than we know it here, and I think perhaps they ground their claim on fact."

"What is more, they are better trained in its use, and are better prepared for testing the condition of mother and unborn child. They have means providing quiet, which is essential; and of furnishing the 'atmosphere,' which means much to the treatment. They have every accessory, but even at that actual 'twilight' sleep is never without its danger."

Method Opposed By Doctors Who Visited Freiburg

The opinion of each of the other physicians was the same. They believe that where sufficient scopolamin is used to induce actual forgetfulness, the mother is put in peril, and the child runs the danger of nervous strains, which, after birth, may leave the mind slow to develop.

Another physician summed up his opinion in the following quotation from Dr. Joseph B. De Lee, of Chicago, who studied the treatment at Freiburg, and described his observations in the "The Modern Hospital":

"The method," said Dr. Lee, "is one that may not be practiced in the home, its general adoption throughout the country would result in an appalling infant mortality and an enormous maternal mortality and morbidity."

While in Holland this summer I talked with several American physicians who had just returned from Freiburg, where they were to observe the method. Their opinion, after first-hand knowledge, was that of Atlanta physicians.

They found that the drug scopolamin is in purer or less variable form there, that the conditions of the hospital better induce the sleep, and that the equipment allows of superior tests of the condition of mother and of unborn child. They were convinced that the "twilight" sleep would be a source of danger if it were tried in the home or in the general hospital. They were not opposed, however, to the use of "scopolamin" in small quantities, such as usually are employed here.

HOW WE TEACH CHILDREN TO THINK

New Methods of Teaching Atlanta Children By Observation and Expression Is Shown Here--Group By Three Are Studying Natural History--Little Girl At Top Is Modeling From Clay--Three Boys At the Bottom Are Dramatizing History Lesson

THE old dull studies, new life has been given by Atlanta public schools.

Children study now in parks, in grocery stores; and, in fancy, make long journeys.

The land of the east, of white tea-roses, and petals, and scents, was the subject last week.

Let's suppose, said one class, that we are going to Japan. Let's suppose we are on board train, and are passing through many cities and many states. Now we are on shipboard, and are putting out into big water; all the land is gone and we are sailing away and away toward the rising of the sun. Now, we're days out from port, and nearing mid-way islands.

And, now, at last we are at the end of the journey in the land of plum blossoms and lanterns, and we see blue branches, and color and light, and pig-tailed sailors, and flowers and blue rivers. And—

Route 3,000 Miles In Fancy; and Then Sailed Over the Sea

At that very minute another class was "coming back" from China—landing home again to write of the long journey. You can't guess how delightful are these compositions—pure imagery of little children. Two which follow here, the first by Kathleen Hunsberr, are charming bits of childish fancy:

"One bright summer morning," begins "the voyager" I started on a trip to China. I took the train at the terminal station for San Francisco. I rode 3,000 miles on the train.

I crossed the Mississippi river and the Rocky mountains. Then I took the boat and sailed across the Pacific ocean and landed at Shanghai. While I was there I visited a Chinese school. Boys shout out loud in school. Chinese teacher thinks the boys are idle if they do not study their lessons out loud. When the boy thinks he knows his lesson he goes up and gives his book to the teacher and turns his back to her, and shouts the lesson out loud.

The other one's by William Pearce:

"It was a bright summer morning. My mother packed my trunk and my father took me to the station and bought my ticket. He put me on the train for San Francisco. I passed the Mississippi river and the Rocky mountains. I rode 3,000 miles before I reached San Francisco. I caught my ship and sailed 5,000 miles across the Pacific ocean and landed at Shanghai."

"Shanghai is a funny little city. It is a narrow road and no sidewalks at all. The houses are only one-story high. The churches are nine stories high. They have bells all around them and when the wind blows, it rings the bells. I visited a school and heard the boys recite their lessons. They study out loud and start at the back of the book. They write toward the bottom, instead of to the side, as we do. After seeing all these strange things I thought I had rather stay in Atlanta than China, so I caught my ship for home."

All this is a better way of learning. It's richer, fuller. Never has Atlanta given its pupils greater opportunity.

Children of a primary grade last week were learning measures. They went from school to a grocery, and for an hour made their classroom among barrels and boxes and crates, and saw him as he measured his goods.

Pints, quarts, pecks came to mean more than facts from a book—they were what the grocer sold to them were the cups of tin or the wooden boxes filled or heaped with his stock in trade.

There, the children borrowed his price list, and back in school learned figures with the grocer as their subject. If Mr. So and So's potatoes sold at so much a peck how much would three pecks cost?

Children Dye Caves In School Yards and Became Cave People

Another class began the study of natural history. They didn't try to learn of trees and flowers from a book. They went to Grant park and saw what the teacher had to tell. She told them the names of plants, she told them something of the skies, something of the weather signs, and how hard they worked.

You might think at first it was all play. But it wasn't play. It was the surest way to learn, and the way to learn so much more than the books could teach.

It all gave them ideas, taught them thought. And in the class room they wrote the things they had seen, and began to learn expression.

Children in the second grade took up the study of cave people, and acted their little histories. At Stewart avenue and at Ivy street schools they dug caves in the yard, and played in them at recess. When play time ended, teachers found it hard to make them quit being cave people and become children again.

The third grades now are just about to start home geography. They plan to learn just as much as they can about Atlanta. They will know about the streets, and about the buildings, and about how we manage our city affairs.

They will make excursions, and will see the city with their own eyes; and when they will tell about it in papers they write, and it all will form into pictures and ideas and will prove to be a development did not just an accumulation of dull facts.

The system wants to make the teacher cheerful, and wants to make the pupil think.

To accomplish this latter end the schools started by having the children get first-hand knowledge. This, wherever possible, has been induced to do.

At the open-air school in West End, they have modeling boards, and the children express in clay some of the things they learn. The little girl in the accompanying pictures is engaged in that task. It is hoped later that all schools will be as well supplied.

Curfew Bells For Everyone Under 18 In This Town

Fifty-Pound Wildcat Is Killed Near Guyton--Cordele Lady
Mails Pocketbook

WAYNESVILLE, N. C.—This town wants a curfew law to keep everybody off the street at night who's under 18 years old. The "Carolina Mountaineer" says editorially:

"Some of the parents of the town and others interested in the welfare of our boys will go before the aldermen at their next meeting and ask that a curfew law be passed for Waynesville."

"The object is to keep boys under 18 years of age off the streets after an early hour each night, so they will keep out of mischief and out of bad company."

"We have all observed many youngsters on the streets and even in worse places late at night, when they should have been home studying, or asleep in bed. This is a fine law for any town and we heartily endorse it for the youth of Waynesville. Most people take good care of their horses, hogs or cattle and usually try to keep up with their duties but their children are turned loose to be at the mercy of a wicked world."

Catamount Killed After Hard Fight

GUYTON, Ga., Jan. 9.—A large catamount, which has been breaking chickens and hogs, was killed the other day in the Ogeechee river swamp about five miles from here. A party of hunters who were striving to the hounds in search of a fox, came on the big cat. Before it was shot and killed, it wounded severely two of the hounds with its sharp teeth and claws. The cat weighed about 50 pounds, and was as large as a sound dog, full grown.

Cordele Lady Who Mailed Her Purse

CORDELE, Ga., Jan. 9.—Passengers were rushing hither and thither the other day at the Union station. One lady held her pocketbook in one hand and a letter in the other. Suddenly, just as the train began to pull out, she mailed the pocketbook by pushing it through the letter slot in the mail car, and started to go shopping with the letter. When she found out her mistake, the train already was under full steam. But she got back the pocketbook by wiring to the next station.

At 99 Years She Makes Four Quilts

LUMPKIN, Ga., Jan. 9.—Mrs. Louisa Messer Singer, 99 years old, had a birthday party here the other day. She was born in Gundelsheim, Germany, in 1816, and when she was nine years old, her parents moved to Baltimore. She lived there until she was 22 years old, and then married and moved to Lumpkin. Although she is 99 years old, she still does housework, and in the last six months has made six quilts. She says she expects to do even better the first half of the new year.

She had eleven children, six of whom are living: F. S. and J. G. Singer, Misses Carrie and Alice Singer, and Mrs. A. L. Raleigh of Lumpkin; Mrs. J. M. McKnab, of Euftalia; Her grandchildren are: H. L. Singer, Joe L. Singer, Geo. W. Singer, F. A. Raleigh, Mrs. A. Tignor, Mrs. Daniel, Mrs. Moreland and Mrs. Watson, of Atlanta; Mrs. Turpin, Mrs. Annie Singer and C. A. Raleigh, of Macon; Mrs. Douglas and Miss Annie McKnab, of Euftalia; J. D. Singer, Frank and Julian Singer, Mrs. Barr and Mrs. Stover, of Lumpkin.

Sun Doesn't Shine; Gives Away Papers

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Jan. 9.—The sun didn't shine here the other day, so Editor Lew Brown, of the "Independent" gave away his whole edition as he always does in a case like this. He agreed with the public is that, whenever the sun doesn't shine in St. Petersburg, up to the time his paper goes to press, every copy issued that day is free. This is the 23d time in 51-12 months that he has been obliged to give away the "Independent."

Albany Is Ried By Christmas Air Guns

ALBANY, Ga., Jan. 9.—Every boy in this town got an air rifle Christmas, and now they are shooting up all the dogs, cats, chickens, pigeons, and window panes about the place. The police say somebody is going to lose an eye before long. It is strictly against the city ordinances to shoot air rifles in the city limits, but these boys don't seem to care for law and order. The chief of police has directed his men to give special attention to them.

Bad Whiskey Makes Crime, Says Judge

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 9.—"Crime has increased in Chatham county," says Judge Walter G. Charlton, of the Chatham superior court, "because the whiskey is so cheap now. In the meanest article a man ever drank. It isn't whiskey, it's a collection of sulphuric acid, old boots, and anything else that's handy. I believe that 50 per cent of the crimes can be traced so it."

How Preachers Here Spend Off Hours Their Recreations Vary From Reading German Books to Playing Golf

THE recreations of Atlanta preachers vary from German literature to golf.

"I read German in the original for a pastime," said Dr. H. M. DeBose last week. "Then, I walk from one to eight miles a day. I usually do that while making my congregational visits. But even when there are no such visits to make, I take the long walks. I make it a rule never to have any vehicle—horse and buggy, or automobile—just so I must walk. But my pleasantest pastime is reading German."

"I play golf," said Dr. John F. Purser. "So does Dr. White and Dr. Daniel and Dr. Wilmer. We usually play at Ansley park, and both White and Wilmer have made that course in less than ninety."

But my big vacation is going up to the Smoky mountains of Tennessee, and walking from there to Asheville, N. C. I've done that for three years, spending about ten days on the road, and walking every foot of it, and I've found it pleasanter than a trip to Europe."

"We usually start out with very little money. We stop with the mountain people, we sleep in their cabins, and we eat their food; we just live along with them for ten days and all that while we are walking through the most beautiful country you ever laid eyes on."

"Dr. Daniel and two young men and myself made up our party last year. We were rough clothes, we took no luck on the road, and we spent the nights in mountain cabins, sitting up very late many times, talking to the people. They'd have listened to us all night. On these trips I've met men and women who've never seen a train, men and women who've lived their whole lives in the big hills."

"My recreation," said Dr. A. A. Little, "is for my wife and myself to get away from things for awhile, either that or to go to the other extreme—walk through town and try to look in a detached way at the people coming and going. Then, too, a moving picture show is a recreation."

Millions Were In Junk; For One In Six Rags Atlanta Throws Away Nothing Nowadays. Junk Trade Gives Work to 300 People. Tires, Bottles, Bones Put to Good Use

DON'T jeer at the small boy dragging his wooden wheelbarrow loaded with fragments of old stove, nine beer bottles and a piece of rubber hose. He is contributing to one of Atlanta's greatest industries.

Did you know Atlanta dealers ship out one million dollars' worth of junk every year? That's what Mrs. Stein says, and he ought to know. He should know, for he is the junk dealer himself, with his warehouses on Marietta street and his big iron yard.

"It all finds its way down here," says Mr. Stein, with a wave of his hand over the boxes and barrels and bales in the gloomy warehouse. "There's a thousand or two auto tires—worth three cents a pound. That tire cost thirty dollars new—it's worth 75 cents to us. We buy them by the thousands, from owners, garages, vulcanizers. And nobody can tell just what is a good tire or a bad one until we tear it open—and then it's too late."

"Back in the dark corners are barrels of screws and shiny, queer-shaped little fixtures—all from the telephone company. That barrel of metal and five hundred dollars or more—it's worth a few cents a pound. Here are bits of costly storage batteries, new junk. Here are great coils of insulated copper wire, apparently new and valuable, but there's a defect somewhere in the inside, and it's better to junk it than repair it."

"Nobody throws anything away nowadays," says Mr. Stein. "The big corporations used to waste thousands in the scrap heap. Now they sell everything. We'll buy almost anything you can imagine and we've never failed to sell anything we bought."

How 300 People Make a Living Off Pure Junk

It takes a wise man to be a successful junk dealer. One must know quite a good deal about every business in the world which has anything to sell. He must know just how much he can pay and just how much he can get. When the reporter called on Mr. Stein he was busily dissecting an electric meter, analyzing it for brass, copper, iron and steel, weighing each metal, and figuring to a cent how much he could bid for them. There's no guesswork in the junk business.

"Yes, about three hundred persons make a good living gathering and selling junk to Atlanta dealers," he said, after a bit of calculation. "Some of them make fifty dollars a week. Most of them less. The small boy is still in business, but he sells to the wagon men, not to the dealers.

"We buy in half a dozen states and sell all over the country. That pile of auto tires will be assorted and shipped to six different factories. They are re-made into fine rubber. Ether, which takes away human life, resurrects dead rubber, you know."

"See those beer bottles? Did you know a second-hand one is worth more than a new one? Sure. The new bottles must be 'swatted' to see if they'll stand the pressure, and twenty per cent break in the process. The old ones have been really tested, you see."

"See that copper? Those big kettles and worms came from moonshine stills, broken up by the revenue men and brought to Atlanta. We bought them from Uncle Sam. See those queer-shaped copper jugs? They came from Germany, full of a syrup used in making a soft drink."

Antique Hunters

Always Searching The Junk Shops

"Say, if we could ship them back to Germany now we'd get rich. Copper is worth forty cents a pound there, and we can buy all the old copper we want in America for twelve cents. Germany wants it for cartridge shells—but it's contraband, and we can't deliver it."

In one corner there are bales upon bales of rags, old coats, old trousers, bits of carpet, every kind of textile fabric.

"The cotton rags are washed and sold for cleaning machinery," said Stein. "Those old coats will go to a picking machine in the east. Steel fingers will pick every bit of wool from them and it will be spun again and woven into a new suit of clothes. They call it shoddy. That suit you're wearing may have been originally worn by a man dead seventy-five years ago!"

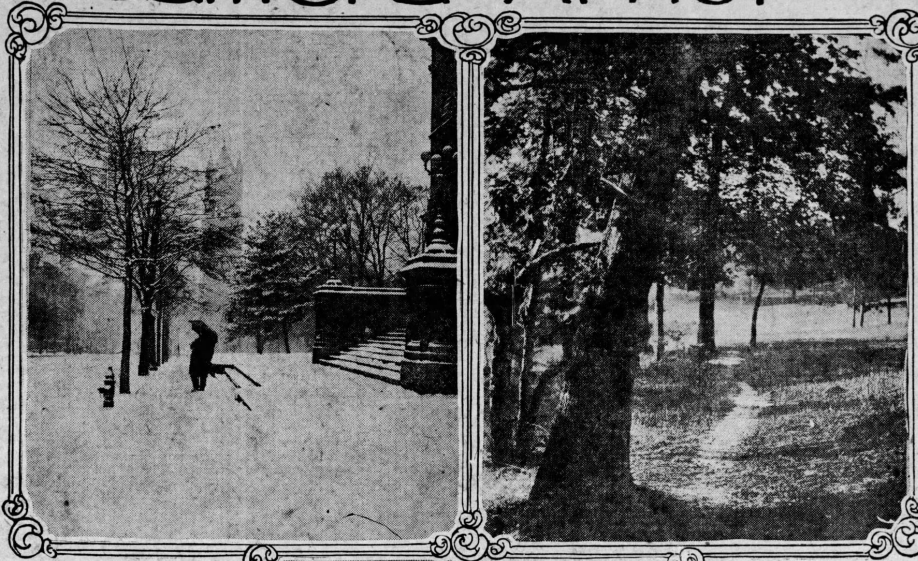

"Valuable picks ups! Sure. Most of the antiques you see in the show cases from junk houses, antique hunters worry us nearly to death. Sometimes they find something they want."

"I was helping unload a box of brass from Athens once when it crashed and broke into the street and out my finger. A woman in a passing automobile stopped, picked up a brass candlestick from the wreckage, and said, 'How much?' I said 'Five dollars,' just to be rid of it. She paid me in a minute. That candlestick was ancient Chinese work, hand-carved. It was a beautiful dragon. She was an old woman, and worth I don't know how much. But it would have been melted with the rest if that woman hadn't stopped just when she did."

New Book Is Praised

A NEW book by Gertrude Capen Whitney, suggested by an incident in August, Ga. has been greeted by critics with praise for the sweetness and delicacy of its thought and the charm of its diction. Mrs. Whitney writes in an aptness of expression and a skill in character-drawing that sets her book apart from this year's large output of fiction.

Each is characterized by charming bits of philosophy, and by little whimsical touches that linger in the memory. Among her writings are "Above the Shame of Circumstances" and "Roses From My Garden," but neither of these were read with greater pleasure than her latest book, "Yet Speaketh He."

How Germans Have Succeeded in Poland Review By Military Expert of Operations In the Eastern Theater of the War—Story of Strategy and Valor Against Russians

The following resume of operations in the eastern theater of the European war was prepared by a trained military observer in the employ of the Associated Press and brings the operations up to the fall of Lodz, December 5. The same writer prepared the previous resumes of operations in France and Belgium which were distributed by The Associated Press some weeks ago.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 9.—A military observer who has just returned from the eastern theater of war gives an interesting resume of the operations there up to the capture of Lodz by the Germans on December 5.

He points out that in the beginning it was the plan of General, now Field Marshal, von Hindenburg to cut the Russian lines of communication by an advance from Suwalki in the direction of Bialystok, and, possibly Baranovitch. With this in view the destruction of the fortress Osewits was attempted by the Germans early in October. But the terrain proved unfavorable, realizing that the plan of General von Hindenburg was, as Russians concentrated a large force against the German left wing.

For a while von Hindenburg persisted. This led to the fighting about Augustowo and the vicinities of Bialystok. Finally the planned reduction of Osewits had to be abandoned, and the Germans, instead of continuing their vigorous offensive along the East Prussian borders, were obliged to assume the defensive in those parts.

As in other parts of the European theater of war, the men began to bury themselves in trenches, von Hindenburg leaving his forces on the East Prussian border in circumstances resembling strongly those in Flanders. Both Russians and Germans began a field siege in which now one, then the other, would for a time keep up an aggressive, the sole purpose of which was to let the opponent know that it was considered proper not to move about too much.

Plan Defeated by Austrians Failure to Arrive Promptly

Towards the end of October von Hindenburg's desperate efforts at the head of a large German force advancing in the direction of Ivanograd. At the same time the Austro-Hungarians, having recuperated from the debacle of the Danke-Aufenberg operations against Lublin and Przemyśl, were ordered to drive the Russians across the river San and out of Galicia. The Russian general staff had been obliged to rush reinforcements to the Suwalki theater of war. This had caused the situation in Galicia, where von Hindenburg had taken advantage of it.

In his advance upon the Ivanograd-Rivne line, von Hindenburg finally reached the banks of the Vistula, to discover, however, that the Russians had fortified all bridge heads and elevations along the river. Several attempts were made by von Hindenburg to force a crossing, but he soon discovered that this could not be done. He was able, however, to stand his ground.

Meanwhile the Austro-Hungarians had again lost ground to the Russians. Jacek had been taken and while the Russians had been driven out of Eastern Hungary, they were now threatening the Austro-Hungarian rear. The Russian troops in the Bukovina. Recrossing the river on a narrow bridge, the Russians for a time even threatened to cut their way

School for Old Folks Is Held In Bartow

Work of the Teacher Sounds Like Fairy Tale, But It Is Really True

UP IN the mountains we have a little girl at work who is simply a wonder for getting letters out of the mountains and leading them out into the light. The story of her three years' work sounds like a fairy tale. But the results are there to show that it is the real article."

This was written to M. L. Brittain, state superintendent of schools, by Henry Milam, who is county superintendent in Bartow.

The "little girl" he spoke of is Miss Amaretta Brooks, and the very wonderful work she has done has been to teach the adult illiterates at Macdonia in Bartow county.

After school hours for the children, another school begins—one for the old folks. They come with the same books the children had used and gather in a group, many past middle age, while this little teacher shows them the simplest beginnings of the school.

"Alam," they say, as they listen intently, just as the children listened. All the countryside, even folks getting into the evening of life, call her "mammy," for she is the teacher not only of the little children, but of all the community.

"I persuaded Miss Brooks to try the class of adults," continued Mr. Milam, "so she made the effort to enroll eleven, five whom could neither read nor write, and none of whom could do so well enough to tell it. She taught the five to write their names and to read simple sentences and do simple sums in arithmetic, and the others to do more than that. The best part of it all I think was the teaching of all of them how to use their Bibles."

"I was with her on the closing day of her school when this class met with the children and community in a general good time. One of the men said he would not take $500 for what Miss Brooks had taught him."

through in northwestern Galicia. This was asserted, however, by prompt maneuvers on the part of the German and Austro-Hungarian forces, who offered a strong defensive on the Cracow-Petrikow line.

During the first week of November progress was made by the German and Austro-Hungarian forces. The Austro-Hungarians held the Russians in check from Cracow to Przemysl, and the German forces the line Cracow-Petrikow-Miava. But the forces of the two empires were too small to carry on a sustained offensive against the Russian masses which had moved across the rivers San and Vistula like an avalanche. It was then that von Hindenburg decided upon a plan which may be said typical of him.

By means of a strategic retreat he intended to break the Russian front. He ordered his center to fall back and kept his own wings steady or less in the positions they had occupied, forming in this manner a rough c-decise into which he hoped to trap the Russian force, which he felt would be sent to follow-up the retreating Germans.

Fortified Bridges Checked Advance of German Armies

It is generally admitted, the observer says, that von Hindenburg's plan would have succeeded had the Austro-Hungarian forces been more mobile and effective. As it was the Austro-Hungarians, hampered by bad roads, failed to follow their line of advance. The Russian effort was made to "bite off" the Russian forces which had taken up the pursuit of von Hindenburg. It was found that the tardiness of the Austro-Hungarians had permitted too many Russians to push after the German forces.

For several days a situation said to have no parallel in modern warfare existed. In the center of the theater of operations was a large Russian force, surrounded on three sides by Germans. Behind this line Russian forces were forming—the German position having thus two faces—and beyond the Russian line of German forces was forming in the north, and a line of Austro-Hungarians in the south and west.

Behind this line Russian forces were forming—the German position having thus two faces—and beyond the Russian line of German forces was forming in the north, and a line of Austro-Hungarians in the south and west.

The first of these was that his "swamp tactic" of the East Prussia had taught the Russians a lesson; the second was that he had credited the Austro-Hungarian officers with a degree of efficiency they did not possess.

Much it not been for the gallant conduct of his own men, von Hindenburg might have gone down in disaster. But the Germans virtually cut their way out of the East Prussia and were in the last division freeing itself from the strong Russian embrace in the first days of December. Then came the taking of Lodz ending this phase of the operations, and the siege of Przemyśl followed.

Paradoxical as it may seem, according to the observer here quoted, the Austro-Hungarian army lost nothing by leaving the greater part of the fighting to the Russians. To keep open lines of communication that country was almost impossible in spite of the fact that the Austro-

NEW SENSE in the HOME EDITED BY MARION HARLAND.

HOME POINTS ABOUT CAKE BAKING.

A FEW days ago a woman wrote me a letter about cake making. After describing the difficulties she had had in getting an even result, telling me of how unusual was her success, that she could never be sure of having a good product, she inquired with apparent innocence, "Do you suppose that any of the trouble can be due to guessing at quantities instead of measuring them?"

I have no reason to doubt that the correspondent wrote in good faith. Yet it seems incredible that at this stage of culinary development, when cookery manuals and institutes of domestic science abound from one end of the country to the other, when every paper of any size has its housekeeping column, and when in each and every one of these accuracy of weights and measures is insisted upon as essential to success, a woman who can cook at all, who can moreover write an intelligently expressed letter, should ask such a question as this.

I do know that there are cooks who pride themselves upon never measuring their ingredients, but upon "guessing" at them. I have tasted the food they have cooked, and sometimes it has been as good as if compounded strictly according to rule. On the other hand there is never any certainty as to how their product will turn out. The only way to be sure of a uniform result is to be the closest care in measurements and weights, following the rules laid down by those who wrote the recipes.

More even than exactness in these respects is required for consistent success in cake making. You cannot always "throw things together" and look for a perfect cake. Even the finest ingredients will not win success without care in the mixing.

I had this impressed upon me so strongly a few years ago. I was staying at a farmhouse where the freshest eggs, the richest and purest of milk, and the best butter were abundant. One morning I saw the farmer's wife mixing a cake. She had a bowl containing nearly a pint of cream, and into this she broke a couple of eggs.

"Don't you beat your eggs separate?" I asked.

"I always put them in just so," she assured me.

Such was the excellence of the materials that I anticipated the appearance of the cake with agreeable expectations, but when I came to taste the result, I was smooth, tough, insipid. Instead of having the smooth fineness of texture which should be the result of the perfect mixture of the ingredients, it was a mass of lumps, some of which were so large that it was not good to eat.

Then you are making cake do not indulge in haphazard methods or lack of method, measure out everything carefully. Do not "guess at" your half cup of butter, your cup of sugar, or your baking powder and flavoring. Cream your butter and sugar together until they are light and thoroughly blended. Whip the whites of your eggs to a stiff froth, the yolks until they bubble and thicken. Stir the yolks into the creamed butter and sugar, put in the milk or water next, then the flour, into which you have sifted the baking powder and salt; last the whites, alternately with the flour. These are the general directions, only to be varied from if the recipe gives other orders.

Beat your cake well up from the bottom with a spoon, stroke, have the mass pressed sufficiently and the oven ready for the cake as soon as it is ready for the oven. Test the heat of the oven by thrusting your hand into the open oven. If you can keep it there while you count twenty the oven is in a fit state for baking. Do not open the oven door to look at your cake for ten minutes. If it browns too quickly on top lay a sheet of unprinted paper over it; little oven seems to hot set a bowl of cold water in with the cake to lower the temperature moderately. Do not slam the oven door when you are baking cake or bang pots and kettles around in the stove during the process. This often makes a heavy cake.

Let me repeat what I have often said before that everything for cake making should be in readiness before the mixing is begun, and that you will want all the ingredients should be assembled and then the beating and the blending may be started. Look over the table first and be sure nothing is missing, so that you may not have to stop at a critical point to fetch a needed article.

No cake is really cheap, but some are expensive, while others which are pleasing, if less rich, can be provided to meet the cravings of the family sweet tooth. You are wiser to select a simple variety than to attempt an imitation of one of the costly kinds.

An excellent and inexpensive cake which is made without butter, milk, or eggs, and thus appeals to the housekeeper of an economical turn is the following:

APPLE SAUCE CAKE.

Work together half a cup of fine white dripping, or suet and lard, or vegetable shortening, and one cup of sugar, add to them one cup of unsweetened apple sauce, a teaspoon and a half of ground cinnamon, quarter of a teaspoon of ground cloves, one teaspoon of grated nutmeg, one cup of raisins, one level teaspoon of baking soda dissolved in a little hot water, and two cups of flour. Beat all together hard until the ingredients are well mixed, turn into a shallow baking pan such as is used for biscuits or into a brick bread pan and bake for forty minutes. stand it on the edge with a cloth thrown over it to become perfectly cold before putting it away in the cake box.

This cake is better the second day than the first and will keep well for some time—if looked up. It tastes like spice cake, or fruit cake and is so good that no one would suspect its cheapness.

PLAIN LAYER CAKE.

Cream together two tablespoons of butter or one tablespoon of butter and one of other good sweet shortening with one cup of sugar. Beat separately the whites and yolks of two eggs. Mix the yolks with the creamed butter and sugar, add two tablespoons of milk and a cup of flour, with which has been sifted a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, alternating with the whites of the eggs. Beat all well and bake in jelly cake tin, taking care to spread the batter evenly over the pan when it goes in that the cakes may be of uniform thickness throughout. With such cakes as these you may use jelly for filling and either sprinkled sugar over the top or spread them with a boiled frosting, or you may make an apple sauce filling or one of chocolate or cream. The last is one of the best and most wholesome of layer cakes. The filling is made as follows:

Heat one cup of milk in a double boiler and stir into it two teaspoonfuls of starch mixed to a paste with cold milk.

Cook and stir well until the compound thickens. Whip one egg light and separating the white and yolk and stir into it half a cup of sugar. Pour the hot cooked cornstarch mixture upon this beat well, return to the fire and cook for five minutes, at rising constantly. The cream should thicken and be a delicate buff in color. Take from the fire and put aside to cool; then flavor with one teaspoon of vanilla or of bitter almond oil, as you prefer. When entirely cold spread between the cakes. Fill fine sugar over the top layer.

If you wish you may add a tablespoon of grated chocolate to the cornstarch, cooking it until it melts and blends with the mixture, then proceed as directed above.

NUT CAKE.

Cream together half a cup of butter and one of sugar, add to this half a cup of cold water, the yolks of two eggs beaten light, and then one and a half cups of flour with which has been sifted a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, alternating with the whipped whites of the eggs. Beat all well and bake in a brick tin in one loaf, but it is perhaps better if cooked in small tins or party pans.

CURRENT OR RAISIN CAKE.

Cream together half a cup of butter and two cups of sugar, add to them the yolks of three eggs beaten light, a cup of milk. Put in three cups of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, then alternately with the stiffly whipped whites of the eggs, season with one teaspoon of grated nutmeg and last put into the batter one cup of clean currants which have been picked over and dredged with flour, or the same quantity of raisins, also rolled in flour. If you wish you may substitute quarter of a cup of shredded citron for part of the raisins. Do not stir much after the fruit goes in—only sufficient to mix it in well. Bake in two small loaves or in muffin tins.

SPONGE CAKE.

Weigh six eggs carefully, take half their weight in flour, just their weight in sugar. Divide the whites and yolks of the eggs, beat the whites to a stand-firm froth with the stiffly whipped whites of the eggs, season with one teaspoon of grated nutmeg and last put into the batter one cup of clean currants which have been picked over and dredged with flour, or the same quantity of raisins, also rolled in flour. I would like to tell you and other kindred spirits that inexpensive editions of the writings of our beloved Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney are on the market. I was brought up on her books, they nourish and develop that sweet spirituality which lies in the heart of every young girl, my almost lifelong work for girls, have found nothing else so helpful to young girls as Mrs. Whitney's books. I am sure that the writings of Mrs. Charles, author of "The Shepherdess's Cottage," will be of great help to my little girl days.

Song-Birds Who Foxtrot and Tango

(Reprinted from The New York World.)

WHO ARE the champion one-steppers, two-steppers, fox-trotters, etc., of the Metropolitan Opera company, which probably will sing in Atlanta this spring?

Why, Andrea de Segurora and Anna Case, of course.

"At the last 'Moments Musicaux,'" says the New York World, "they had the big ballroom floor all to themselves and they gave an exhibition that won a lot of applause. They danced three dances which they were not paid for dancing; they were merely attending the affair (which is under the patronage of a dozen Metropolitan song birds), and joining in the general dancing which followed. But they danced so well that everybody else left the floor.

"Segurora is called Tanguero because of his dancing, and he is out every night when he doesn't sing. He's considered the best dancer at the Metropolitan, excelling in the tango—he's a Spaniard from Barcelona and used to dance it many years ago.

"Miss Case is more of a fox-trotter and hesitation waltzer.

"It is old Spain and New Jersey dancing together."

A Rattlesnake Gets Man Out of Jail

Judge's Sentence at Forsyth Works a Miracle By Making Dumb Speak

DALTON, Ga., Jan. 9.—A five-foot rattlesnake got a man out of jail here the other day. Officers went over to Phelps, in this county, to arrest the fellow on a misdemeanor. But while he surrendered all right, he didn't want to give up a grip he had in one hand. But Bailiff Fox took it anyway, and began to sling it around carelessly. The prisoner grabbed for the snake, and the officer, thinking there was surely a pistol inside, snatched the bag open. A big snake raised its head, and that strange "whirr" which is a rattlesnake's warning, sounded from inside the bag.

When the prisoner reached the county jail, he insisted on keeping the grip with him; and since none of the arresting officers particularly hated for it, he was allowed to have his way. But when the jailer and the other prisoners heard about what was in the grip they began to get up a petition to have him pardoned. Sentiment ran so high that the recorder imposed as light fine as possible, and everybody helped the man to get out of jail just as quick as he could.

Miracle at Forsyth

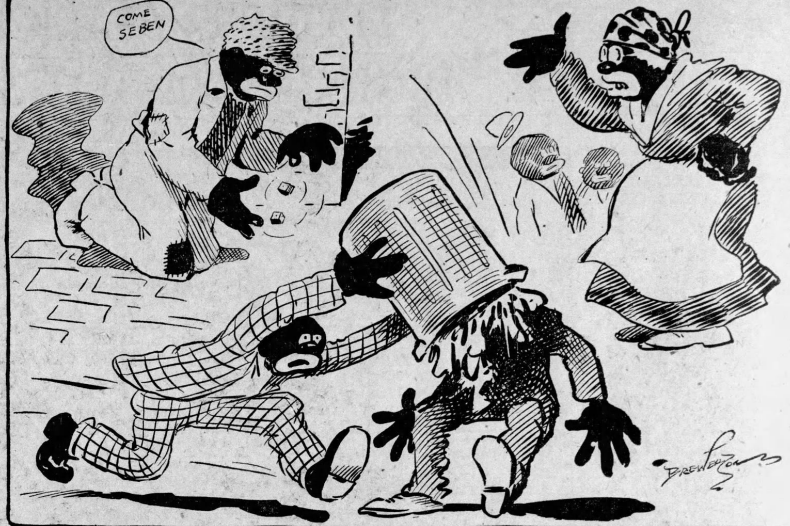

FORSYTH, Ga., Jan. 9.—A deaf, dumb and insane hobo was made perfectly all right here the other week by a six months' sentence to the chain-gang. He was charged with theft. Judge J. O. Persons heard all the evidence—how the hobo had hung around town for weeks, and at last, how Howard Flint's coat had disappeared and been found on the man's back. The accused sat dumbly in the court room, his eyes fixed ahead in a glassy stare, apparently deaf to all that was said. The evidence was completed, silence prevailed in the court room.

"I sentence the accused to six months, I was scared. But I got cued up by har ter see de sights on Christmas an' I stayed hyar too long tell de perlice put me in de kailer, boose."

"There was a hollow groan, and the accused then began to his feet.

"My God," he said.

At Judge Johnsing's Police Matinee

By Gordon Noel Huertel

A Study in Colors

Sam White was black, and also green. While he took in the town; And he was blue, and this is true— They did him up quite brown.

Sam, a wild-eyed, country, colored youth, black and green and also blue, faced Recorder Johnson on the charge of shooting craps.

"Ie frum de kentry, Jedge Johnsing, be harried to explain, 'an' I cummed up hyar ter see de sights on Christmas an' I stayed hyar too long tell de perlice put me in de kailer, boose."

"Ah, ah," exclaimed the recorder, "another desertion of craps for craps. It will crop out when you crop out, Sammel."

"Dese town niggers done got all de money I foctched wid me," muttered Sam with much financial depression.

"Of course," the recorder told him, "all they want is to cultivate the acquaintance of a country farm-hand with a few dollars. You just stay at home now that you have seed the town, for as you sow so shall you reap. Follow the plan, Sam, and you won't have any furrows on your brow; but as I fear for you I won't use a muck-rake. The man with the hoe always has my sympathy, especially when he is very hoary—that's my homology. So you can go home to your fields and hoe 'em some more."

"Tank Gawd," exclaimed Sam as the bailiff led him to the door and liberty. "Dis town haint gwine fer see dis nigger no more tell Gabrul blows de horn."

"That's our rural male delivery," remarked the recorder.

Bloodhounds for Fire Department

WAYCROSS, Ga., Jan. 9.—Bloodhounds are not usually regarded as necessary for fire fighting apparatus, but they are a part of the Waycross fire department. They are used, not in running down fire, but in chasing the senders of false fire alarms. Because of the pretty red color of the fire alarm boxes some people are always tampering with them, giving the firemen long and expensive trips. Chief Hall is out of patience with such foibles and when he checked up his annual report found so many false alarms he decided upon a novel plan of stopping the false calls. Bloodhounds owned by the city street superintendent, John Youmans, are to be kept at city hall, in which the fire headquarters are located, and are to be taken to the box from which each fire alarm is received.

If the alarm proves false, the dogs will be used immediately. If not, the dogs have merely had a fast run. When Chief Hall first tried to make the dogs stay on the

Augustus Gartrell, Smallpox Expert

OF COURSE I WAS SCARED -

CHILD BETWEEN TWO MATTRESSES

CLIMBED A 12 FOOT FENCE

IN A BARREL

"— and then the chief says 'You aren't afraid of smallpox, are you?' and, of course, I said, right quick, 'No, not a bit.' Then he said, 'I knew I was sitting in the buggy with a smallpox patient beside me, driving him to the hospital. Scared?' 'No, I had hidden it there.' 'You got over it. I've driven thousands over there since then, cared for them, buried them, prepared them for burial. And I've never had the slightest bit of a case.'"

Augustus B. Gartrell, city inspector of contagious diseases, was talking, having been driven to a corner in the board of health office and urged to speak of his work. Mr. Gartrell, as may be inferred, has the one city job that nobody else is trying to take from him and he gets it.

"Yes, I've had some right queer experiences," he said. "You know, folks used to be worse afraid of smallpox than they would be most anything to keep from going to the smallpox hospital. The negroes were especially frightened."

"One day I went to a house which had been reported and found four or five in a family down with smallpox. I put them in the wagon and then sealed up the rooms and began to burn the fumigating chemicals. We had driven perhaps half a mile when the mother suddenly said:

"'Looky heeh, mister, do dat smoke you se makin' hurt anybody?'"

"It kills all animal and germ life, of course," I explained.

"'Let me out'n dis wargin,' she yowd. 'My baby's in dat room.'"

"We hurried back, threw open the room and dragged the child from between two mattresses. The woman had hidden it there. I got her from the hospital. Yes, it was still alive."

"The negroes would do anything to keep us from finding them. One day I had a report of a case in a negro house and went there. There was nobody at home, but I got the door open and searched. In a corner I found a barrel with a piece of tow sacking over its top. Inside was a little girl of ten, provided with a pitcher of water and a pan of food. She had a well developed case of smallpox and her mother had hidden her there. We picked her up, barrel and all, and took her out."

"Anti-vaccinationists would have a hard time converting 'Gus' Gartrell or his associates in the board of health. They have no doubt whatever of the efficacy of vaccination."

"See here," says Gartrell, "in the past seven years there have been approximately 250,000 pupils in the Atlanta schools. In that time there have been three cases of smallpox—just three. In two cases we found the vaccination had not taken properly and in the third the mother hid the child and the virus from her child's arm to save her from a little ail."

"Soreness."

"No, smallpox isn't the scourge it used to be. I remember a winter we had 225 cases. There hasn't been one this winter, up to last week, when a case or two came to the hospital. And it isn't so dangerous nowadays."

"I remember when we had seven guards to keep the patients from escaping. We used to the negroes hand end foot to keep them in the wagon. One negro woman, with a bad case of smallpox, climbed a twelve-foot fence around the hospital and got away. Yes, we caught her."

"It's different now. Folks have learned that patients are well treated and made comfortable out there, and they don't mind coming. We haven't a single guard now. In fact, Atlanta has gained such a reputation that whenever a negro finds he has smallpox he hurries to town, even from a hundred miles away. It isn't the city's business to treat out-of-town patients, but when they're here there isn't anything else to do. For self-protection we've just got to take care of them."

"Visitors? Oh, no, there's no rule against visitors that I know of. We've never needed one. I've never yet seen a visitor with curiosity folk don't know where it is. It's out near the city stockyard. And don't you call it the 'pest house,' either. It's the smallpox hospital, that's all."

Daniel Gabriel's Recommendation

DANIEL Gabriel Rossetti, colored, faced Judge Andy Calhoun last week in the criminal court of Atlanta. On the clerk's desk lay a big revolver, "exhibit A," on either side Daniel G. a fat patrolman stood.

"He's a desperate character, judge," said one of the cops. "He pulls this gun out when we tried to break up an argument he was mixing in on Decatur street. He snuffs this gun, but it slipped out of his hand and dropped on the sidewalk. Then we nabbed him."

Daniel Gabriel shuffled uneasily, opened and shut his mouth, and rolled his eyes. He evidently wanted to talk.

"How about this, boy?" asked

Judge Andy.

"Jedge, ter yo' honah, suh, Ah mean to pull no gun," said Daniel, raising his right hand on high. "Ah seen these gentlemen comin' and was just a-reachin' for mah rec'mendation when dat gun draps from mah pocket."

"Rec'mendation for your what?" asked Judge Andy.

"For mah rec'mendation, Jedge, mah rec'mendation. Ah carries one all the time. When a police walks up to me, Ah always reaches for ter show it. Yasuh, Jedge, Ah was just a-reachin' for mah—"

"Fifty dollars or three months," said Judge Andy. The bailiff marched Daniel G. Rossetti to the cooler.

FIRST EPISODE The Man With the Black Vandyke

THE quivering center of all the intense agitation in Brynport was Bouncer. That energetic colic could remember no occasion so exciting as this in the Moore household; but, as every one seemed thoroughly satisfied, Bouncer helped in the happiness until his tail ached.

Once, and once only, Bouncer had been able to get past old Aunt Debby. This time he caught that black cook with her hands full of snow white dough, the lost her dignity and her comely gray hair and sat down on the floor with a plump which jarred the house as Bouncer plunged beneath her flaring skirts, but she saved the dough! Bouncer, however, was up the stairs in a twinkling, a heavy white streak had flashed into the daintily creased room of his friend, mistress and playfellow, pretty June Moore. Here, all was billowy confusion. June herself, standing by the long, low row of feebly curtained windows, was the nucleus of all the frothing white. Her girlish cheeks were flushed and her eyes were wide and shining, and a fat dressmaker, with her lip in her mouth and a mass of diabolical wrinkles in her brow, was of her knees completely encircling June with pats and puffs and twitches. A brownstained dressmaker's helper, with a flaming red spot in each cheek, and her yellow hair dragging to denote her repressed agony, and with her bosom stuck full of pins and needles and things, was standing rigidly with one hand holding an orange blossomed veil. June's mother, in a very special dress and with her hair done in the most painful precision of which a Frochman was capable, stood just in front of June, wringing her hands and helping with her eyes in all the sacred ceremonies.

Marie, Marie of the broom and dustier, black hair and red gaunet, waited near with a wide grin and moist eyes, to have things hung upon her when there was no more space upon the little white bed nor any of the chairs. Over by the door, talking incessantly, was Iris Bethering, a black haired as usual, as tall as the dressmaker's helper and more excited than all of them put together. She was the broom friend.

For only a moment Bouncer was permitted to gaze upon this puzzling scene. When he sprang too near the central figure of it all, with the perfectly natural and commendable intention of leaning upon her to show his undying affection, there was a combined shriek from six women, and five of them put him out.

Well, it was a strange world, and by way of setting his mind at ease Bouncer ran six times around the house and chased a cat up a tree and exchanged loud views with all the neighborhood children who hung upon the fence waiting to see the bride.

There were pink bridesmaids at every window, and a nice, regular father, gardenial and sick hatted uncle, Uncle Albert, walked up and down the porch, looking at his watch until eternity dragged by, but when the end of time was come the limousines began to move, and Bouncer, with a yelp of welcome sprang to his regular seat in the side of the first driver. Jerry pulled Bouncer's ear and shut the long pointed muzzle in a gasolinist and gave him other rough tokens of friendliness; then the door opened and there came out a lady in whom the neighborhood children found it difficult to recognize June Moore, but filmy robes and pale cheeks were no disguise to Bouncer.

"Bouncer!" June Moore, in her most important finery, stopped swiftly down and took his head between her white gloved hands and looked into his wistful eyes and touched her cheek, for an instant, with a stifled cry, and whispered to him, "I love you, the world, her very last girlish secret. Then Aunt Debby, now divested of dog, dragged Bouncer back and locked him in the shed, while June Moore rode away never to be June Moore again.

What was this new world which she was approaching? No bride knows and no woman, June smiled contentedly. Ned—how had he filled her world! And how happy they were to be! Why, they were at the chapel, the pretty little gray chapel loaded with vines. And there was Ned at a window of the Sunday school room and looking so strained and uncomfortable. And there were the ushers in the doorway. She hardly knew how she was suddenly transformed into a procession, and trembling! In a mist they knelt and said responses, and Ned put a ring on her finger. His own fingers were cold and clammy, but his voice was warm and earnest as he promised to love, cherish and protect her as he best loved upon her all his worldly goods.

Some one in the church was crying softly—Iris Bethering, the bride friend. Bouncer, who was comfortably patting her hand. There was a general dabbling of handkerchiefs. Bright eyed little old Grandma Moore smiled and smiled through it all, a gray little grandmama, with as smart a gown as any there. Ned's father, a strong faced, handsome man, sat stolidly with his arms folded and went over the ceremony with his lips, word for word.

Then down the aisle, wafted by his tail, his blue ribbon orn and the marks of the earth under the shed up on his fluffy coat.

Then the organ pealed again, and beneath the vine-crested portals, which June Moore had entered on the arm of her father, June Warner, on the arm of her husband, now emerged into the world.

Then the bustle and confusion began again—the mad scramble to the train, the mad dash to the going away amid showers of rice, and the earnest god-speeding of friends, and the semihysteria of Iris Bethering, with Bouncer seeking his indignation protest wherever in the muffled distance.

Just before June came downstairs in her trim little traveling suit of blue her mother had slipped the symbol of every woman's tragedy. It was a purse stuffed with crackling bills.

At last they were alone, launched upon the sea of life! They were in the tiny drawing room with a white toothed porter stowing things into racks and hanging things on hooks and sticking flowers everywhere.

Ned had clasped her in his arms and had covered her blushing face with kisses in that first realization, and now she sat by the window, her head pillowed contentedly upon his shoulder, and outside the world they had known up to this point in their lives was slipping past them. A tiny elder darted into her eye. Her first instinct was to grab her handkerchief, and the search for that resulted in a little cry of dismay.

"My purse!" she gasped.

At that moment her mother, returning home to a house which had suddenly grown lonely, picked up from the table in the library the little purse.

"Too bad!" Ned's voice was full of sympathy.

"Anything in it?"

"My money," she replied in concern, with all at once a pale springing into her heart.

"Is that all?" he laughed. "Well, little wife—" and he laughed again at her swift blush—"Why am I here?"

"I know," she faltered, "but"—She stopped, confused, and cast down her eyes at her interlocking fingers.

"I'm just the same as your purse, except that you can't lose me," he told her, dwelling with fond eyes upon her hair, her smooth, round cheeks, her red lips. He reached into his pocket with blurt

When he tried to shift her, she slid into his arms without a flicker of her eyelids and lay there sleeping like a baby, her long lashes curving on her cheeks, her red lips half parted.

He lifted June's feet into the other end of the seat. She gave herself one pretty shrug, which settled her into the graceful lines of perfect rest, put a pink palm under her round cheek and slept straight on. Ned covered her with a cloak, kissed her cautiously on the outermost surface of her cheek and strode out to the smoker.

He was back in five minutes to see how she was resting. The pretty little bride had not the rosy flush of sleep which he had expected to see. Her face had the pallor of weariness and her beautifully curved brows were knotted as if in distress. He thought that the light in her eyes disturbed her and drew down one of the blinds.

That troubled knitting of June Warner's beautifully arched brows had not been due to the light shining in her eyes, but to the lurid flame which had sprung up in her mind, and that flame danced itself into the figures of weird dramas. Come Ned tipping the white toothed porter; then she saw Ned, with equally brave generosity, giving her three bills.

Ah! The tantalizing fragrance of fresh cookies! She was in her mother's kitchen and old Aunt Debby, black as midnight and round as a barrel, was drawing a pan of the delicious cakes from the hot oven.

Wonderful cookies, those! June was just reaching for one when, much to her disappointment, they were not there. Aunt Debby was not there. The was she, and not the wan little boy, who stood there pitiously begging!

What wonderful scene was this? A bleak, wild country with huge, strange birds flying over it and no human habitation in sight. There were human creatures, though, two of them—a big, ponderous jaded savage with matted hair who carried an enormous club over one shoulder. Behind him trailed a smaller figure, a woman, with matted hair hanging to her waist. In her nose was a ring, and to this ring was attached a leather thong, the other end of which was in the man's hand. He was taking home his bride! Music, the wedding march, the little gray, ivy hung chapel at Brynport. Was that Ned coming down the aisle? Was that June just behind him? Was there a leather thong in Ned's hand? Oh! Was the other end of that thong—

There was a sudden jolt and screaming noise, a rattle and bang and the sound of hissing steam. June Warner jumped wildly to her feet and gazed around the little compartment. There were the flowers, the boxes of candy, the scattered rice. Compulsion came to her slowly, for she was still half in her dream. The train had stopped. She snatched up her cloak, jumped up on the seat and brought down the paper bag which contained her prim little traveling bag; then she jerked open the door. In the opening she stopped with a sudden flash of memory. Nobody, the first of his generous bounty, the first of her pay for being he, it was keen and real nevertheless, and until she had thrashed out this question with the woman which had suddenly grown up in her she could not make of her marriage with Ned the desired result. Skin, still, it had held her as her ideal. The black Vandyke man passed quite near her, gazing at her with a smile. She walked around him.

Ned's wife! She jerked it from her belt, threw the three bills on the seat, ran down the steps, jumped to the ground and sped across the tracks.

Where should she go? Home? She could see her father and mother playing her with question upon question, driving her to tears with their worried in stance and their utter lack of understanding. How could they understand a problem which had grown up since their youth had passed? Not home, then.

If not home, where then? As if from the setting sun the answer came to her. Just New York. So big and so intent upon itself that friends may dwell around the corner for years and never know.

Ned at that moment was extracting slow information from a half dead and totally dumb old woman with a cross grained disposition. Yes, she had seen a young woman get off the train at a station back there. She didn't know if the station was Farnville or not, but she had seen her on her hat.

June Warner, alone on the station platform, had grappled meantime with the first problem of her independence. That problem had to do with the means of getting to New York, and it was concretely expressed in her beautiful little gold watch.

In the meantime Ned's train had drawn up at the next stop, and he had the station master in Farnville in a minute and was inquiring for a lonely bride.

"Why, yes," huskily shouted the station master at Farnville.

"A young lady," said that description has been looking around here on the platform and she's just getting on the down local," reported the station master.

"She's coming to New York, is she?" asked the station master.

"Yes, she's coming to New York, is she?" asked the station master.

"A black Vandyke stranger. Ned almost reeled. So that was why she had left the train!

"Story told," he yelled, and he swung round. Station masters are busy people.

A train thundered in—a down train. Ned looked at the bulletin board. The New York express. It arrived in New York at the same time as the local.

The first passenger to board that train was a perishing faced young man, swinging four pieces of white ribboned luggage.

June, paying no attention to the man who had helped her, turned nervously into the car, a day coach, and viewed the interior with despair. In that coach there were only two passengers, a man and a woman, sitting together.

"Would you like to buy a watch?" invited June in her smallest voice as she confronted the rigid woman who had helped her.

"No," returned the woman without moving a muscle. "Only her feather wadded. The man cast at the merchandise a look of contempt.

"It's a very nice watch," urged June. "It's a solid gold case and I don't know how many jewels. I only need money enough to get to New York and hire a taxi. Then I'll be home."

The black Vandyke man saw some sense. "I don't want it," observed the woman, looking straight ahead, while the man's gaze of contempt strayed from the merchandise to the vendor.

"Very well," nodded June, and a grain of rice fell from the brim of her little blue hat and bounced in the right woman's lap.

The woman turned sharply, then she half rose and looked at the top of the hat. There was more rice on it!

"Let me see that watch," she said softly. One bill contained a picture of June and her dog, and the other the date of the gift and her name and address.

"How much do you need for this?"

"She wants about $10, ma'am." This was from the pale faced conductor, who was so broad and stuffy that he was an offense in narrow aisles, but his eyes were full of twinkles.

The rigid lady snatched the watch and turned to her husband. "Dan!" It did not seem possible that her voice could take on a wheedling tone, but it did.

"I want $10."

The man turned to her with cold disdain. He produced $10 from a tight bound wallet and instantly into June's mind there flashed that picture of her standing before Ned a piteous beggar!

The runaway bride took a seat by herself and was presently given the discomfort of knowing that the man was grumbling at the woman incessantly for her watch.

Vandyke man went over to them, and she saw him pay some money, and then he came back to June with the watch in his hand.

"Of course you won't permit me to present you with this?" he pleasantly observed. "If you care to send for it later, however, I will be very glad indeed to give you my card."

"Thank you," she accepted, and, taking the card, put it in her belt. "You are very kind."

It was not until they were nearing the station in New York that he spoke to her again.

"Pardon me," he said, bending over her. "If I can be of any service to you on your arrival I shall be very happy indeed."

"There is nothing, thank you," she replied, smiling at him. "You are very kind."

At that particular moment the New York express overtook the local and slowly forged ahead, and Ned Warner, peering feverishly into every passing window saw the suave, black Vandyke stranger bending gracefully over his wife, and June was smiling up at him! Then Ned, against his will, passed on.

The express, however, was delayed a moment, and the local pulled in ahead of it. Ned was the first passenger out of the express, and he landed on the platform just in time to see the Vandyke man and June going through the gate side by side.

Ned rushed after them, but it was not until he reached the Vanderbilt avenue stairs that he saw them again. June was darting through the door and just behind her was the man. He was smiling. With a rush Ned rounded the mainstrade and went up three steps at a spring. He arrived only in time to see June speeding away in a taxi cab and to see the black Vandyke man starting after her in another. He jumped into a third one and shooed.

"Chase them!"

"Hold on there!" gasped a breathless voice, and a shouting porter plied Ned's white ribboned luggage on top of him.

Away through the tangled traffic, across Forty street, over the bridge, and down the avenue rushed the three taxis at breakneck speed.

THE WEDDING OF JUNE AND NED.

heartiness and produced a pair of bills just as the porter came in with two snowy pillows.

"Good work, George!" approved Ned, and, catching two bulging eyes fixed upon the roll of bills he held in his hands, Ned stripped off a dollar. "This is my letter of introduction," he observed as he passed it over.

Ned turned to June, smiling, as the porter went out with the pillows.

"I think you'll feel happier carrying this around," he teased the bills into her clasped hands.

She tried to close her hands against it, with a sudden instinct which she could not fathom tried to draw away from the money, but his fingers were the stronger, and, laughing, he kissed her and straightened up to put the balance of the money in his pocket.

She looked at the bills, while a slow flush of crimson came up over her face. Why should this have embarrassed and humiliated her? It seemed absurd, for this was a part of marriage.

Ned sat beside her and put his arms around her, and she held up her lips to be kissed. Suddenly she buried her head in his shoulder and cried.

Something had been swept away from her, something had been broken. The man had given and she had received.

CHAPTER II.

THERE was a shadow on the Palisades, the grayness of a cloud which had not been there as they had started upon this journey. Money—the woman's money. It had been all right for June to coax her mother and wheedle her father, but they were mummy and daddy. Yes, Ned would give her all he could afford, but that was it—he would give it to her! She would be the recipient of his bounty, or worse still, would be paid for being his wife! She suddenly arrived at the startling fact that this was the status of every wife. It was a most disquieting thought, destructive of self respect. It was unbearable.

Ned Warner felt the precious hand on his shoulder become heavy. Poor little girl. Getting ready to be married was wearisome work. Well, little wife's terrible tribulations, such as separating from home and friends and Bouncer and being made to give an account of herself, were all over. Ned braced himself against the arm of the seat for fifteen minutes, while the tired head drooped lower and lower. Poor little girl. Her neck would be stiff from that strained position. He moved over so gently, but the continuous was an unconscious revelation of familiar old kitchen was not there. Why, this was the kitchen of the new apartments, the nest which was waiting for Ned and herself after the honeymoon! June was in a big white and blue dotted apron, struggling in the baffling art of making cookies. Some one came in. Ned—his eyes shining as the fragrant cakes were drawn from the oven!

June turned them over on a white cloth. Ned burned his tongue, but he was highly pleased with the taste and he gave June some money. He patted her on the shoulder. Again she saw her mother paying Aunt Debby and patting that valuable cook approvingly on the shoulder.

In her dream June saw Ned's office, a stiff, prim place, as staid as the elder Warner. There was a nice looking stenographer, quite obviously great friends with a nice looking young secretary, and there was a nice looking office boy. It was evidently Saturday night, for Ned presently rose from his desk and walked over to the nice looking stenographer. He handed her the envelope containing her pay and they exchanged a frank smile and a few pleasant words. Pretty good pay the stenographer received. She earned it. Ned handed the nice looking secretary an envelope. They exchanged a few pleasant words and a frank smile.

Ned handed the nice looking office boy an envelope and laughingly squeezed the boy's chin and rumbled his envelope into his inside pocket. Then Ned walked over to June and handed her an envelope.

It was larger than the others. He bowed to her very courteously as he presented it. He spoke a few pleasant words, but did not smile frankly, and she cast down her eyes. There seemed to be a distinct understanding that she had not earned her envelope.

A poor, shivering old woman sat huddled in a doorway. Ned stopped, looked at the old woman a moment and then walked across to her and handed her a coin. He was very magnificent about it in spite of his compassion. He broadened his chest with the exhilaration of the good deed, then he smiled down at his wife most generously. Yes, his wife, for the old woman was gone and June, in luxurious furs, but huddled, was in the doorway.

It was she to whom he had given the coin! He was so tactful and so kind and so very little boy stood mutely beside them, piteous aspect in his upturned eyes, and held out his clawlike little palm. Ned, beating with kindly good will, placed a coin in the outstretched palm and put his hand to his forehead as if he had given her, for it

As the train started to pull out she had a mad impulse to run after it, to have it stopped, to call Ned, but there was no movement in her.

Ned, beating with kindly good will, placed a coin in the outstretched palm and put his hand to his forehead as if he had given her, for it

As the train started to pull out she had a mad impulse to run after it, to have it stopped, to call Ned, but there was no movement in her.

He was in the kitchen of the new apartments, the nest which was waiting for Ned and herself after the honeymoon! June was in a big white and blue dotted apron, struggling in the baffling art of making cookies. Some one came in. Ned—his eyes shining as the fragrant cakes were drawn from the oven!

June turned them over on a white cloth. Ned burned his tongue, but he was highly pleased with the taste and he gave June some money. He patted her on the shoulder. Again she saw her mother paying Aunt Debby and patting that valuable cook approvingly on the shoulder.

In her dream June saw Ned's office, a stiff, prim place, as staid as the elder Warner. There was a nice looking stenographer, quite obviously great friends with a nice looking young secretary, and there was a nice looking office boy. It was evidently Saturday night, for Ned presently rose from his desk and walked over to the nice looking stenographer. He handed her the envelope containing her pay and they exchanged a frank smile and a few pleasant words. Pretty good pay the stenographer received. She earned it. Ned handed the nice looking secretary an envelope. They exchanged a few pleasant words and a frank smile.

Ned handed the nice looking office boy an envelope and laughingly squeezed the boy's chin and rumbled his envelope into his inside pocket. Then Ned walked over to June and handed her an envelope.

It was larger than the others. He bowed to her very courteously as he presented it. He spoke a few pleasant words, but did not smile frankly, and she cast down her eyes. There seemed to be a distinct understanding that she had not earned her envelope.

A poor, shivering old woman sat huddled in a doorway. Ned stopped, looked at the old woman a moment and then walked across to her and handed her a coin. He was very magnificent about it in spite of his compassion. He broadened his chest with the exhilaration of the good deed, then he smiled down at his wife most generously. Yes, his wife, for the old woman was gone and June, in luxurious furs, but huddled, was in the doorway.

It was she to whom he had given the coin! He was so tactful and so kind and so very little boy stood mutely beside them, piteous aspect in his upturned eyes, and held out his clawlike little palm. Ned, beating with kindly good will, placed a coin in the outstretched palm and put his hand to his forehead as if he had given her, for it

Drain Off and Dry Up the Pools of Lawlessness

Mania for Spurious Reforms Verges on Anarchy and Un-Godliness

By Bishop W. A. Candler

Governor Whitman, of New York, made a most timely utterance when he protested in his inaugural address against lawlessness in the land and appealed for a more general and profound respect for government. We have had in our country during recent years far too much censure of governmental authorities and far too much criticism of the laws of the land.

Nothing has occupied these evil assaults; not even the federal constitution. That greatest political document ever framed by the mind of man has been attacked by the critics, some affirming that it is faulty, that it reserves too much power in the states and others declaring that it centralizes too much power in the federal government.

Agitations and counter agitations have been carried on, far and against various forms of legislation in the several states. Laws have been enacted in heat and repeated in haste to the impairment of respect for all laws in the minds of the people. The mania for spurious reforms has proceeded to the verge of anarchy. This state of things is not only unwise; it is positively ungodly. Writing to men who lived under the rule of Nero St. Paul said: "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the ordinance of God, he resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation." (Romans xiii. 1 and 2.)

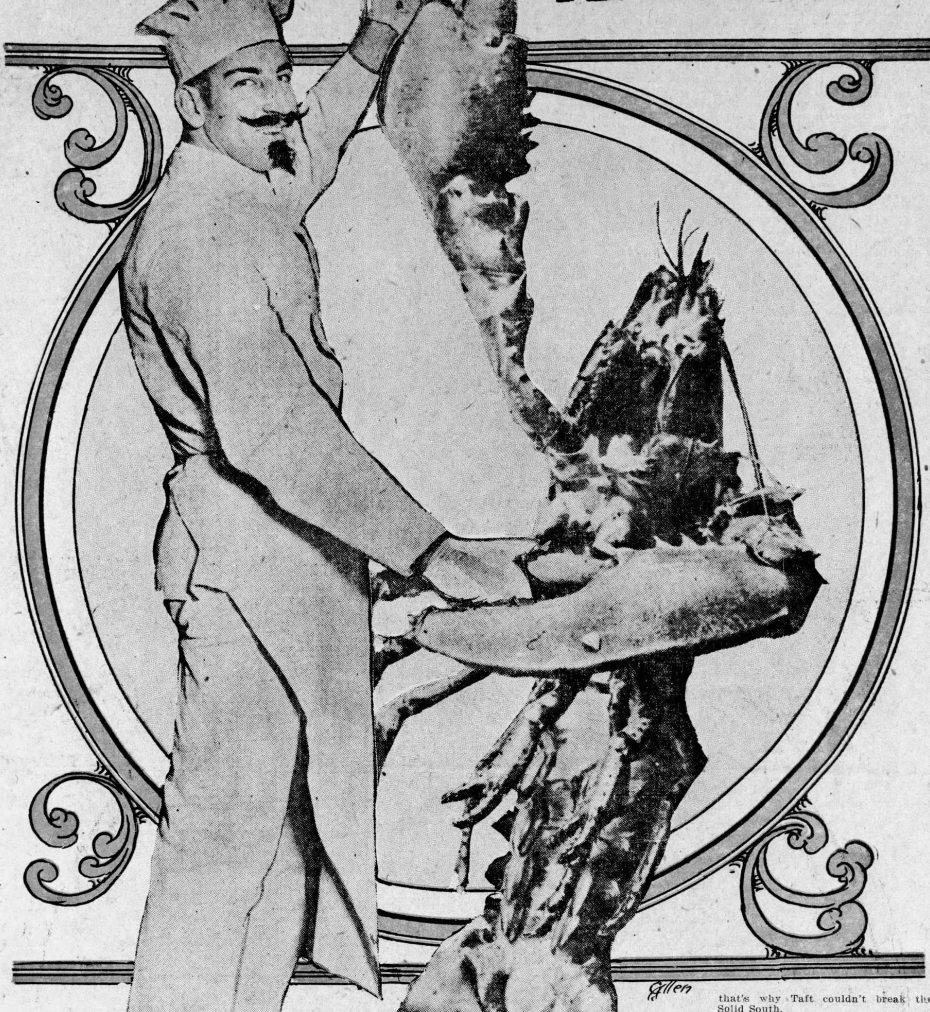

The besetting sin of people living under a popular form of government is disrespect for the laws which they have made for themselves and contempt for the authorities whom they have set over themselves. That which they have created in carelessness, they are disposed to destroy in recklessness. Demagogues who are out of office are found in abundance to encourage agitations to repeal statutes, condemn courts, and ensure the men who happen to hold office in the government. Such was the case with the unstable, turbulent Greek democracies of ancient times, and the same evil tendencies are manifest under the representative governments of modern times. Some misguided men among us have no hesitation in demanding that by the processes of "the initiative, recall and referendum," all the ills of the Grecian democracies will be restored in our day.

Worst of all, most of the modern agitations and agitations move entirely with reference to monetary gains. No sacred interest of the promotion of popular virtue and intelligence inspires them; they are concerned only with material things. For pelf and property they are ready to make an insurrection against all settled principles and established civil order. Our people are accustomed to censure the Mexicans for the multitude of revolutions and counter revolutions in the perturbed land to the south of our country. But it is not impertinent to ask, if things are very different with them? The Mexicans do not know much about ballots and electoral campaigns. Not knowing, or caring much for the election, when they wish to change their government they raise a revolution. Their demagogues seize arms and take to the field to accomplish their aims for pelf and power. Our demagogues are less brave. With a conservative regard for their carcasses, they resort to abuse of the government and frenzied agitations for legislative revolutions. Stripped of certain superficial characteristics they do not differ essentially from the Hottentots and the Hittites of old. In pursuit of their selfish objects they stop at nothing.

Let us take a point: Men of all parties, who are intelligent and sincere, who admit that the present administration at Washington has had to solve most difficult problems with reference to foreign affairs. In the neighboring republic of Mexico there has prevailed a most perplexing and protracted state of intransigence. In Europe the most dreadful war in the history of the world is being waged. Considering all the complications of the case it is a thousand wonders that our country has not been drawn into an armed conflict. With our patient and skill the president and his advisers have been able to save the nation thus far from such an unpalatable calamity. It would seem that all patriotic people would approve the course of the administration, at least, would remain silent for the present, if not able to approve. The hour is too critical for capricious criticism. In England even the socialists and militant suffragettes have hushed their harsh voices when the British cabinet is struggling with the issues of the war. But in our country parties and factions, including an ex-president, have tried to embarrass the administration. Men identified with factions within the party of the president have rallied out against him. Can we be surprised at the present state of lawlessness in the land when prominent men are found capable of such reprehensible conduct?

It is time for good men of all classes and all parties to frown upon such injurious and unchristian methods. We have had quite enough of acrimonious criticism of the governmental agents of the nation. Neither law nor liberty nor organized society can survive in an atmosphere of suspicion and censoriousness.

FROM 'POSSUM TO OSTRICH - THE RANGE OF ATLANTA'S APPETITE

Perpetual probings by clumsy political surgeons makes nothing better than political pus and social gangrene.

A fact which underlies these manifestations of evil is a decay of faith. Any decay or decline of religious life among any people quickly reveals itself in social unrest and insubordination to law among them who rebel against God instinctively. Atheism is anarchistic in its tendency and godlessness runs speedily to lawlessness. It is not an accidental coincidence that while a number of men, including some preachers scolded, have been attacking the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, there have been assaults also upon the constitution and laws of the nation. Such things always go together. Unchecked, and allowed to proceed to their logical end they invariably culminate in such upheavals as the French revolution.

The American people should be called to return to first principles of religion and government; and they should heed the call. "Blasting at the Book of Ages" yields no building material suitable to be worked into the structure of a stable social system. Political power and material prosperity can not long survive the perishing of personal piety among the people.

Our colleges and universities should be cleaned of professors and lecturers whose brains secrete scepticism and radicalism like the tail of the cuttle fish secretes its inkly fluid. Many of them are at their best quite raw specimens of scholarship, and have not half the learning which they affect. Of a number of them it may be said with justice that "when they speak they diminish the sum of truth in the world." They certainly impair the quality and decrease the quantity of moral goodness and religious faith among men.

It is time for us to set about draining up and draining off the poisonous pools of lawlessness in the United States. They imperil the life of the Republic.

A Fantasy in Photography--Do You Know the 'Chef'?

"Sure, ostrich is good eats. Just like turkey, only more so. The one we ate on New Year's day was as tender as a squab."

One of the members of the Capital City club which had a young ostrich baked with oyster dressing for its New Year feast, was discussing the rather odd dish.

"But don't make the mistake some of 'did,' he continued. 'We made friends with the ostrich before he went to the chopping block. He was an awfully friendly creature. Would follow one around like a dog. And it's rather well, hard-hearted--to dine off a friend, you know. Some of the fellows couldn't touch a bite.'"

That ostrich dinner wasn't the only queer feast Atlantians have enjoyed. Last year Capital City club dined well on young kangaroo, imported for the occasion. Because the club, who know believe every New Year should be marked by something to eat nobody ever before. Now for next year--it is the steward is keeping that a deep secret--and perhaps there won't be one captured, anyway. And in that case they couldn't."

Atlanta became famous for one odd dinner menu a few years ago. That was the time the city feasted President-elect Taft on Georgia possum. It was Asa G. Candler who suggested it, and several hundred Atlantians paid ten dollars a plate for a very small portion of possum and a very long list of fixings on the side. It was remarked at the time that although the president-elect praised the succulence and delicacy of the baked bixie marsupial the portion on his plate wasn't visibly diminished when the waiter took it away. May be that's why Taft couldn't break the Solid South.

Mays Badgett, an Atlanta violin maker, gave a real bear steak dinner to a number of musicians a few months ago, the steaks coming from a south Georgia swamp where a party of hunters had been unusually lucky. But that doesn't compare with the personal reminiscences of Uncle Tom Marsh, an aged negro who lives out Hapeville way and comes to town just prior to Christmas.

"Snake meat is good eatin' if you picks you 'snakes," observes Uncle Tatt. "I never bit into no rattler--and black snakes is too slim. But a bull snake or a chicken snake makes good meat. What's the matter with you white folks? Ain't a eat a snake? Den what is it? Tell me dat. Well, den!"

Atlanta hotel men are famous for their feasts, but they attack rather closely to standard viands, except when Lee Barnes or some of his pals get hold of the chef and mix up his ingredients for a party. The really odd dinner of the hotel men's association was that pulled off at the Georgian Terrace last winter, when the dining room was converted into a barytard, with live chickens and ducks and a mule. The fact that somebody afterward rode the mule over the table didn't spoil the evening a bit, for there wasn't much left, anyway.

The fact that somebody afterward rode the mule over the table didn't spoil the evening a bit, for there wasn't much left, anyway.

Atlanta hotel men are famous for their feasts, but they attack rather closely to standard viands, except when Lee Barnes or some of his pals get hold of the chef and mix up his ingredients for a party. The really odd dinner of the hotel men's association was that pulled off at the Georgian Terrace last winter, when the dining room was converted into a barytard, with live chickens and ducks and a mule. The fact that somebody afterward rode the mule over the table didn't spoil the evening a bit, for there wasn't much left, anyway.
